Arson investigation intensifies

By SCOTT BREARTON

WHILE THERE are still no suspects in an arson fire that broke out early Sunday morning at Carmel High School, California Department of Forestry investigators said Tuesday they have determined how it started and are following up on several good leads.

"At this stage, I'd characterize the investigation as active," said CDF Fire Prevention Battalion Chief Don Stacy. "We're getting leads from people and following up on them."

Stacy said arson investigators have determined how the fire started but cannot release that information until they have a suspect in the case.

The weekend blaze caused between $600,000 to $800,000 in damage to the science wing, according to CHS Principal Marie Ishida, who surveyed the area early Sunday morning.

"I'm really upset," Ishida said. "I don't know who would be that angry to do this. If they're upset at the administration or the school, this doesn't help. This affects too many kids."

CDF officials said the blaze is believed to have been started in the room where the CHS Associated Student Body holds

Council saves three city posts

■ Members throw out City Administrator's plan for an across-the-board 4 percent pay increase, freezing wages instead.

By PAUL WOLF

FOR THE second straight year, the Carmel Recreation Department was saved.

And then, in a last-minute scramble to preserve city services at the highest possible level, city council members spared the animal control officer and both the city's two gardeners.

In all, it was a rare display of unanimity for the five council members — usually a fractious bunch — at an even rarer Friday evening meeting, held June 11.

Grappling with its second year of employee cuts, the council spared three of the seven city positions proposed for elimination in City Administrator Jere Kersnar's $7.1 million 1993-94 budget.

The final budget is scheduled for adoption at a meeting Thursday, June 24. The council, presumably set on its expenditures program, still has to approve its revenues package. It will hold a public information session Tuesday, June 22.

To restore the three positions, the council had to strike Kersnar's proposal for an across-the-board 4 percent pay raise to all city employees. It agreed to freeze wages instead.

Kersnar budgeted the raise to begin remedying what he views as a lack of competitive salaries paid to Carmel-by-the-Sea employees. He has reported they earn about 8 percent less than their counterparts in surrounding cities. Kersnar has advised that the "parity" issue" is better addressed sooner than later.

The pay raise was budgeted to the tune of $142,000 — nearly to the dollar the cost of restoring the three positions.

Councilman Bob Fischer told his col-

Pebble Beach to host 100th U.S. Open — in year 2000

By PAUL WOLF

WITH LAST year's U.S. Open still fresh in mind, Pebble Beach officials are already thinking about the year 2000 — now that they've learned they will host the 100th national championship.

The United States Golf Association determined the Pebble Beach Golf Links would be "an ideal site" for the 100th playing, and the USGA executive committee approved the site and made an announcement Monday, June 14, according to Paul Spengler, Pebble Beach Co. vice president of golf.

"The event was so successful last year that they (USGA officials) were eager to come back ahead of the 10-year cycle," said Spengler, who also was chairman of the 1992 U.S. Open. "This is a wonderful compliment to this community."

While the championship was played in Pebble Beach in 1972, 1982 and then last year, the USGA's schedule was never tied to 2003. The association announced the championship would be played June 15-18, 2000.

The USGA and the company also announced that the course will be the site of the U.S. Amateur, Aug. 16-21, 1999.

"Having both the 1999 U.S. Amateur and the 2000 U.S. Open at Pebble Beach will allow the two events to complement each other, and it underscores the high regard the USGA has for Pebble Beach," said USGA President Stuart Bloch.

Spengler, who described the announcement as a great honor, also spoke of the economic benefit that should be experienced as a result of hosting the event.

"With all the news of military base closings and the uncertainty about our local economy, it's nice to be able to announce something that will have a very positive effect on local business," he said.

The first U.S Open was held in 1895 on a nine-hole course in Newport, R.I. The championship has been staged annually with two breaks, during each of the world wars. The 1993 U.S. Open is currently underway at Baltusrol, located in Springfield, N.J.

A notice to our readers

SOME 20 MONTHS ago, in an effort to better serve our loyal readers in Carmel Valley, we introduced a special two-page section under the heading "Carmel Valley Outlook." At that time, we felt it was our best way of packaging the news of the valley in one easy-to-find section.

As with all decisions the newspaper makes, we step back after a certain period of time has passed to analyze the pluses and minuses. After a careful review of this particular decision, we have decided to drop the Outlook effective with this issue.

We have received many favorable comments about the Outlook. But we want to play news of the valley in proper context with all the other stories in The Carmel Pine Cone. With the volume of significant news that eminates from the valley, many of the stories found under the Outlook heading, typically on pages 14 and 15, actually merited coverage on pages 1 or 3.

We take pride in the packaging of our product — for example, news of our schools is always neatly tied together — and readers can be assured valley news will be provided similar treatment. As it stands, we do the same for news of Carmel, Pebble Beach and Big Sur.

As always, please feel free to call me (624-0162) if you have questions or comments.

Council's freeze on wages was right move

THE CARMEL City Council last week found itself in the awkward position of rejecting a key plan in the new city administrator's proposed budget.

The action could have been especially uncomfortable considering the fact that Jere Kersnar, in large part, was hired in March with hopes he'd steady the city's financial course.

But we believe council members unanimously voted to do the right thing, and Kersnar showed grace in the process.

In theory, Kersnar's recommendation to budget a 4 percent pay increase for all city workers presented a strong case. Kersnar reports Carmel employees earn on average 8 percent less than workers in surrounding cities, and adequate wages, he says, are pivotal to attracting quality workers.

As a fiscal conservative who likes to think of the long-term good, Kersnar did not wish to sit by while the city's own got further and further behind the rest of the labor market. But council members' immediate sense of worry turned out to be less pronounced than that of the city administrator.

Watching the state

Anticipating the state will claim some $300,000 from Carmel's property tax revenue in 1993-94 fiscal year, Kersnar proposed laying off some seven full-time employees and one part-timer, for a savings of $282,000 (after severance pay and other expenses).

Meanwhile, the proposed pay increases would have cancelled about half the savings, with its $142,000 expense.

Many members of the public spoke against the simultaneous pay increases and staff layoffs, and urged holding onto a number of staff positions. Most vividly, Councilwoman Barbara Brooks told of a caller to her home who said the timing of the pay raise was "morally reprehensible."

So, on June 11, the council voted 5-0 to forego the raise. They also acted to restore three full-time workers and create a new part-time position. (See related article in this issue).

While the council has more work ahead — it is scheduled to study projected revenues later this month — it did manage to settle an important matter.

Kersnar gave every indication he was pleased with the outcome: It was a unanimous and purposeful decision, and the budget remains balanced. After the meeting was adjourned, he smiled broadly and shook council members' hands.

Kersnar's style seems perfect for Carmel. He proposed a budget founded on a strong theoretical base, and then gladly stepped back to let the policy-makers assert their will.

Meanwhile, council members, despite their differences, took their cues — on both restoring positions and freezing wages — from public sentiment.

Carmel workers tend to stay around. Apparently, many would rather earn a few dollars less and be employed in a town like Carmel than be slightly richer somewhere else.

It's possible that, if asked, someone like Fire Chief Bill Hill, who just earned his certificate for 25 years of service, would vouch for that claim. Indeed, Kersnar came to town to learn that, remarkably, roughly 85 percent of city employees were "at top step" in their departments.

Wages are important. So is quality of life. If the city can't offer the former, it must promise to preserve the latter — and there is no reason to suspect a mass exodus of the city's best workers.

Since his arrival, Kersnar has been consistently impressive. But here we take a moment to commend the council for recognizing that Kersnar's argument in favor of pay raises made more sense in theory than in practice.

Condoms in the restrooms

Dear Editor:

The student representatives at Carmel High School want condoms in the restrooms (Pine Cone, June 3).

The natural consequence of the sexual act is pregnancy. Those who engage in any activity must be prepared to accept responsibility for the consequences of their actions. That is why the rightful place for sexual activity is in the loving commitment to marriage. Premarital intercourse should be condemned, not just because it is irresponsible behavior, but also because it is destructive to marriage: it destroys the trust that must exist for a solid relationship between married people. Trust should be earned by self-discipline. Those who don't develop sexual self-discipline before marriage are unlikely to do so afterwards. Playboys make poor husbands and worse parents.

During the past 30 years the U.S. and other Western countries have witnessed a progressive dissolution of family life. The April issue of Atlantic Monthly detailed the consequences in single parents, illegitimate births, teen suicides, dropping SAT scores, etc. This decay in the social fabric must be halted by today's young people who have a duty to their future spouses and children to behave with responsibility and self-discipline.

This end will not be achieved by putting condoms in the restrooms. It has been estimated that every million dollars spent on government provided contraception in the public schools has added another 2,000 adolescent pregnancies as these programs have invariably been followed by increased sexual activity.

Behind the vacancies

Dear Editor:

My husband and I come to Carmel often and wished to do so on Memorial Day weekend. We have our own business so the amount of time we are able to stay is never enough but we did want to stay at least one night.

I called six places looking for a vacancy and was told at all but one that there was a three-day minimum stay. Now when you figure around $120/night for three nights, that comes to a minimum of $360, not including tax. When you add on meals, gas, etc., you're looking at close to $600, at the very least. A pretty hefty amount for the average visitor especially during a recession.

One place I called said, yes, they did have vacancies (plural), but when I asked how much the room was, the vacancies turned to only one vacancy and it was one of their most expensive rooms. It was just a tad too fishy for me so I said. "thanks, but no thanks."

We decided to drive down for the day, have dinner, and drive back the same day. No easy task when you live 3 1/2 hours away, one way!

When we arrived we were amazed at the number of vacancies. In the course of the day some of them filled up but we purposely drove around and looked at each one of the places we called where there was a three-day minimum and every single one still had vacancies at 5:30 p.m. on a Saturday!

Perhaps minimum stays could be a little more relaxed. It might be more profitable for all concerned.

Let's come together

Dear Editor:

Now that Measure H has been approved, I would like to offer some observations about the referendum.

It appears that the residents of Carmel were not fooled by the attempt on the part of a few disgruntled people to obliterate the results of two years of careful analysis and effort on the part of the planning commission and city council to correct some injustices and problems with the commercial district zoning.

It is not unusual that in complex issues as in the current ordinance, there are bound to be some items which deserve another look, as in the changes to permitted uses in the different zones, which can now be re-examined and resolved in an orderly manner.

I attribute the closeness of the vote to the ill-considered survey and money spent by Clint Eastwood and his associates which appear to me to have caused some residents, who otherwise would have voted for Measure H, to change their minds during the last days of the campaign. I hope that they will have learned a lesson from this.

Let us now heal the wounds of this disruptive event and work together for the good of all of Carmel, residents and businesses alike who depend on each other for the city to retain its charm and character as well as its economic well-being.

Measure H — big turnout, small victory margin

By PAUL WOLF

IT WAS a far cry from a mandate.

Measure H, the controversial rezoning proposal, was approved Tuesday, June 8, by the slimmest of margins — 10 votes.

The numbers were settled on late Friday, June 11, following a recount ordered by the Monterey County Elections Department. The yes votes were 1,099 votes, while the no votes totaled 1,089. The percentage margin was 50.2 to 49.7.

The election was remarkable not just for the close finish, but for Carmel's impressive turnout: 56.3 percent of registered voters.

"It is excellent anytime we get over 50 percent," said City Clerk Jeanne Brehmer.

Carmel had the highest turnout in the county, followed closely by Del Rey Oaks with 54.5 percent and Pacific Grove with 45.9 percent, according to figures made public by the elections department.

The complexity of the issues involved in Measure H seemed no deterrent to citizens, although voters also took part in ballots concerning 5th District supervisor, congress and the water district.

At the low end of the turnout list was Soledad with 22 percent and Gonzales with 28.2 percent respectively.

Narrowing the lead

Late election evening, Measure H led 1,076 votes to 1,056. Although the numbers looked good to Measure H supporters, county officials wouldn't call the election because a stack of absentee ballots turned in at the polls awaited counting.

No one knew exactly how many such absentee ballots came from Carmel. The number turned out to be 56. Remarkably, that small pool of ballots managed to cut the yes side's lead from 23 to 10.

"I was surprised by how much it narrowed," said Registrar Brad Clark.

Clark instantly ordered a recount, which yielded the same results.

The 'Farina Factor'

Third-place finisher may have strong influence in determining Karas-Davi victor

By PAUL WOLF

FRAN FARINA may be out of the Monterey County Supervisors 5th District race, but she is likely to influence the outcome at the Aug. 3 runoff between Sam Karas and Jeff Davi.

Davi, the surprise second-place finisher in the June 8 election, can relish in his second-place showing, in which he garnered 5,051 votes against Karas' 8,515. But Farina's close third-place, with 4,593 votes, puts her now in a strong strategic position.

If Farina's considerable chunk of the electorate has any swing value, Davi could be in trouble. But one doesn't find Davi too worried.

"You won't see a major switch in my campaign in order to appeal to different people," Davi said in a telephone interview with The Carmel Pine Cone. "I believe I took some votes away from Sam, and Fran may have had her own following. There are seven more weeks for me to catch up with Sam's name-recognition."

Davi	5,051
Hendrick	2,220
Williams	1,347
	8,618
Karas	8,515
The Farina Factor	4,593 ?

In a sense, Davi, 25, was countering the going wisdom until now — which was that Karas and Farina split the vote during the election, giving Davi a better chance at the semi-finals than the finals.

"I think it was a hard choice for many people (between Karas and Farina)," said Flo Schaefer, a Pacific Grove Councilwoman who was active on Farina's campaign.

She suggested the difference between the two was more a matter of style and energy than platform. "I'd have to doubt very much that many Farina supporters will go for Jeff Davi," said Terrence Zito, another Pacific Grove City Council member who was one of Farina's PG campaign coordinators.

Farina, contacted by The Pine Cone, said she was not ready to make official declarations on her support, but it is widely anticipated she will back Karas, 71, the incumbent 4th District supervisor.

Of the six supervisorial candidates, Karas, Davi and Farina, as a group, earned the bulk of the votes, since David Hendrick received only 2,220 votes, Harrison Williams 1,347, and Noel Mapstead 747. When one considers the Farina factor, the numbers are revealing.

Since Hendrick and Williams' political views may be considered more compatible with Davi than with Karas, Davi will count on the allegiance of those who voted for the two Pebble Beach-based candidates.

FRAN FARINA

Hand over the votes from Hendrick and Williams on June 8 and Davi gets 8,618 — or 103 more votes than Karas earned. But can Farina's partisans be ignored?

The questions now to emerge are: How many Karas supporters will change their minds on Aug. 3? If not, can Davi now appeal to most or all of the Farina supporters?

One thing is certain: Davi suggested his campaign network possesses the most suitable attitude, saying, "We like overcoming great odds."

Rezoning camp outspends foes by 12-to-1 margin; Davi nearly doubles Karas in supes' spending

By PAUL WOLF

SUPPORTERS OF Measure H outspent opponents of the June 8 rezoning proposal by at least 12-to-1, according to the current campaign disclosure statements.

Disclosure statements, which do not contain the final numbers, indicate the successful yes side spent $47,172, compared with $3,775 for the no camp.

Meanwhile, in the 5th District Monterey County Supervisors' race, political newcomer Jeff Davi outspent 4th District incumbent Sam Karas by a 2-1 margin.

The Davi camp spent $23,952, while Karas supporters shelled out $12,234 for their candidate. The two contenders are scheduled for a runoff election Aug. 3.

On the spending for and against Carmel's Measure H, City Clerk Jeanne Brehmer said, "When we get our last filing in July, then we can get a better picture of how much was spent and how much was received on both sides."

Most of Brehmer's information stops short at May 22, and there is the tricky businesses of separating amounts received from amounts spent. For example, as of May 22, Citizens Against Rezoning raised $5,097, but it spent only $3,539.

Controversy erupted in recent weeks when Clint Eastwood, former mayor and a zoning supporter, established the Friends of Carmel/Yes on H Committee, toward which he directed $41,933 of his money. This was not cash funding. Rather, it was sponsorship for mailers, consulting and surveys.

There is no record of any other contributions to the committee, according to Brehmer.

By election eve, rezoning opponents charged that, with the last-minute injection of money, there was a lack of fair play surrounding Measure H. On the other hand, Mayor Ken White, a Measure H supporter, told The Carmel Pine Cone that Eastwood's considerable financial support actually hurt the cause because of all the negative press.

Some of the big ticket items for candidate Davi, a realtor from Monterey, included $3,040 from the Western Mortgage Co., of Monterey, and $1,000 from the California Real Estate Political Action Committee, according to the Monterey County Elections Department.

Karas received $1,300 from Carmel Valley Partners, and $1,000 from a private fund-raising party. No individuals contributed in excess of $1,000 to his campaign, according to the elections department.

As for the four candidates who failed to make the runoff, campaign disclosure statements reported the following:

- Fran Farina, the third-place finisher in the race for 5th District, spent $11,255, slightly less than Karas.
- Expenditures for David Hendrick totaled $5,225.
- Harrison Williams spent $4,787.
- Expenditures for Noel Mapstead were $1,698.

Measure G contributions

The failed Measure G, which would have authorized the construction of the Sand City desalination plant, did not sink because of a lack of funding.

Measure G supporters, who contributed to the Committee for a Secure Water Supply, spent $7,344. Opponents of desalination, who sent their checks to the Save Our Money for the Dam Committee, expended $2,182.

Sen. Boxer here Saturday

THE NINTH in a series of town hall meetings conducted by Sen. Barbara Boxer (D-Calif.) is scheduled for Saturday, June 19 in Pacific Grove.

The meeting, slated from 11 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., will be held in the Robert Down Elementary School Auditorium, 485 Pine Street.

"Town meetings offer constituents a forum where they can bring their concerns and ideas to me directly and where we can openly discuss the important issues facing California," said Boxer, who was elected to the Senate in November 1992. "These meetings are an excellent way for me to keep in touch with the people of California and to let them know that they do indeed have a voice in Washington."

The event is free and open to the public.

Additional information about Boxer's town hall meeting can be obtained by calling 415/403-0100.

Carmel council saves three staff positions, sacrifices four leagues that wages should be "a priority issue" in September if the state's claim on property taxes should turn out to be not as big a hit for the cities as they now project.

At the public hearing Thursday, June 10, residents voiced clear opposition to the simultaneous pay raise and staff cuts. Like last year, many residents spoke on behalf of the recreation department, as well as the other city services proposed to take a hit.

Despite the council's action to save services where possible, the positions still set for elimination are:

- Two police officers.
- The fire prevention officer.
- A personnel assistant in the administrative staff.
- The children's librarian at the Harrison Memorial Library.

Subtle message

In effect, Kersnar was communicating either a mixed message or a particularly subtle one:

The departments will remain responsible for all their duties, just as before the cuts. Even without a fire prevention officer, for example, the fire department must complete its inspections. To do so, departmental restructuring will be in order. Nevertheless, Kersnar stressed, cuts to labor always translate to reduced service.

Regarding the loss of two police officers, Kersnar said, "I do not expect the citizens to feel it, but there will be times when there will be fewer police officers available."

The city administrator had proposed the city save money by contracting its animal control services out to the county. Citizens and council members alike rejected the plan, calling it inadequate and a threat to Carmel's overall quality of life.

Not only did the council agree to save the recreation department, it approved the addition of a part-time worker — at a cost of $10,000 — to bolster the current one-man operation. If the recreation department were to be retained, council members agreed, Recreation Director Michael Gorczyca should be given a fighting chance to run the program effectively.

Deja-vu characterized the public testimony on the recreation department, since last year the program was slated for elimination and a public outcry ensued.

As the meeting adjourned, Kersnar showed outward signs of satisfaction, congratulating each member of the council for preserving a balanced budget after directing several major changes.

P.B. couple's donation buoys county foundation

BUOYED BY a large donation from a Pebble Beach couple, the Community Foundation for Monterey County's total assets have surpassed the $15 million mark, according to Todd Lueders, executive director.

The $15 million plateau was reached and passed when the Foundation received the largest gift from living individuals in its history in April. Mr. and Mrs. Austin Barrows of Pebble Beach donated stock in a private holding company worth about $1.1 million to the Kathleen and Austin Barrows Fund, a donor-advised fund within the Foundation.

The Barrows Fund will continue making grants in areas of interest to the donors. Eventually, a substantial portion of the Barrows' gift will be added to the Foundation's general endowment.

The Community Foundation is a county-wide endowment created by donations from several thousand local individuals, foundations and corporations. Last year it made grants of just under $1 million in education, health, arts and culture, environmental and historic preservation, and social and community services.

According to Lueders, the Foundation's goal for the year 2000 is to reach at least $30 million in total assets.

At their most recent board meeting, the foundation approved grants to local agencies, including two $7,500 grants to:

- The Carmel Bach Festival for their 1993 educational outreach programs.
- The Carmel Valley Community Youth Center for start-up expenses of a new youth recreation program.

Lanz of Carmel closes doors

By SUSAN BECK

IT'S A sad day for ladies who love Lanz.

Known for its feminine prints, flannel nightgowns and reasonable prices since 1946, Lanz of Carmel closed its doors to shoppers for the last time Tuesday, June 15.

Denise Kidd, the store's manager since May, said she was notified in the morning to shut the doors that evening.

The new manager had been assured by Lanz of California's corporate office that her position was secure.

"I was assured of stability," said Kidd. "We just signed a 15- year lease. This is very sad. This was a wonderful company to work for. It's the highlight of my career."

The Lanz clothing chain, which includes 16 stores in California, has gone out of business, according to corporate officials. However, the wholesale division, Lanz Inc., will continue.

Sepp Lanz, an Austrian, founded the first shop in New York. The first California shop opened in 1938.

Linda Leonard of Toronto, Canada, was Lanz's last customer. "Lanz is one of the nicest shops that I have seen," said Leonard. "I'm having a baby, and I bought a baby outfit I saw in the window. I was really disappointed to find out the shop is closing."

Two CV subdivisions gain supervisors' approval

By SUSAN BECK

THE MONTEREY County Board of Supervisors unanimously approved an allocation of 69 lots for two proposed Carmel Valley subdivisions.

The board agreed on Tuesday, June 15, to allocate 44 lots to the Cañada Woods project and 25 lots to the proposed Veeder Ranch subdivision.

Both subdivisions were previously subject to review by the Citizens Subdivision Evaluation Committee, which scores a project based on its adherence to the Carmel Valley Master Plan.

The 550-acre Cañada Woods received an overall score of 76.2 percent. The score for the Veeder Ranch was 80.8 percent. The supervisors also unanimously approved the evaluation committee's results and recommendations.

The proposed Veeder Ranch subdivision is a 83.3-acre parcel in upper Carmel valley along Garzas Road. It is next to the Carmel Valley Trail and Saddle Club and would be divided into 25 residential lots ranging from one to 2.3 acres with up to four lots for low- to moderate-income housing units.

The Cañada Woods property is north and south of Carmel Valley Road. Five hundred acres to the north would be divided into 44 new residential lots and 10 southerly acres would be a service center plus 15 employee housing units. The additional 40-acre agricultural southern parcel would be left to open space.

Limited Lots

The valley's master plan limits the average yearly rate of allocation to 37 new residential lots, according to the county's planning department. The allocation process started in 1987.

The total allocation of lots for subdivision projects, including Quail Meadows, Carmel Greens, Taylor, Veeder Ranch and Cañada Woods, does not exceed the quota of 256 lots allowed through 1993.

In addition, no more than 25 lots may be developed within one year. Therefore, if finally approved, the Cañada Woods subdivision would have to be developed incrementally.

Fifth District Supervisor Karin Strasser Kauffman responded to several residents at the hearing who voiced their concerns about both proposed subdivisions, especially Cañada Woods.

"This is not the application stage," said the supervisor. "This is just the first step to make sure the applicants' comply with the principle policies of the master plan."

She said the valley's master plan is the only area plan that has an additional protective step to provide a subdivision applicant an opportunity to be educated about the desires of the community.

A handful of local residents urged the board to consider their specific desires.

Roger Williams, president of the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association, recommended supervisors limit development to what has already been approved until "overwhelming issues are resolved."

Williams specifically pointed to the drop in the level of service along Carmel Valley Road. He said development within the valley's master plan should be limited until a solution to traffic problems are agreed upon for Carmel Valley Road and at the intersection of Carmel Valley Road and Highway 1.

"Veeder Ranch and Cañada Woods should not receive the board's approval until this happens," said Williams.

Be a Smart Move Up Buyer

Did you buy your first home intending to stay there for just a few years? Have your space needs changed or has your income increased to the point where you're planning to start looking for house number two?

In most cases, it's easier to find that second home than to find buyers for your first one. As part of your strategy, it's best to have your home under contract before you begin a serious new home search. This will make you look attractive to sellers in two ways. First, you won't have to include a contingency in your offer covering the sale of your home. Second, you will look more qualified financially if there is no need for a bridge loan. Both of these factors will improve your bargaining position if you plan to negotiate the price or terms. If you find yourself in a multiple offer situation, the chances that your offer will be accepted will increase dramatically.

Property owners (and renters) can tidy up the strip of city property in front of their residences on a regular basis; bring in empty trash containers as soon as possible after emptying; park cars in garages or carports; if a fire hydrant is near your residence, check for weeds surrounding it, then clean the area. Wasted money and effort

Dear Editor:

It is disturbing to realize that Al Eisner, David Maradei and the Carmel Residents Association have forced Carmel to waste $50,000 and more to hold an election that was completely unnecessary just to appease their ego and vanity. That money could have been used by the city which is in dire need, or it could have gone to the Youth Center or other worthy cause.

The issue of the election for Measure H on the ballot had already been settled by our elected officials who had already voted its approval when the aforementioned individuals petitioned for its placement on the ballot and caused both supporters and opponents to face an angry and expensive election much against the desires and wishes of the public. If this had been defeated we would have been faced with continuing and repeated government by referendum.

If busybodies like those mentioned can be put down, Carmel can get along just fine and be more loving.

Carmel High revisited

Dear Editor:

Congratulations to the Carmel High School Class of 1993 and best of luck to you all. Congratulations also to the school administration for the fast-paced ceremony on Bardarson Field.

And finally, a heartfelt "thank you" to the parents who sponsored the safe and sober all-night grad party in the gymnasium. What a labor of love! The Jurassic Park theme was outstanding.

Dear Editor:

A gigantic thank you to all of you who have expressed your support of the city of Carmel's Recreation Department. To the many in attendance at the budget hearing at City Hall on June 10, especially those who spoke in support of our programs, my warmest thoughts are of you. You are wonderful!

Bring in those books

Dear Editor:

I would like to say to everyone in Carmel: give yourself the gift of valuable shelf-space!

Cull out the books you expect never to read again or just want to share, and bring them to the Scout House where the Friends of the Harrison Memorial Library are getting ready for the summer book sale.

This collection spot is at Mission and Eighth and is open every Tuesday morning from 10 to noon.

In early August I shall have a suggestion as to how you can fill those blank spaces on your shelves.

Carmel Commentary

'We won't let you down'

By Laurie Schumann

THE CARMEL-BY-THE-SEA Recreation Commission gathered on June 12 — the day after being granted a department reprieve — to express its thanks to the members of the community and city council, who appreciate maintaining valued recreation programs for the community.

The realization of what could have been lost was overwhelming: what would become of the after-school program for kids ages 8 to 11? Would the adult painting class or fitness class be able to continue? And what about the holiday camps for kids of all ages? The Recreation Department oversees a myriad of community activities, including the Sand Castle Contest, the Halloween Parade, the Tree Lighting Ceremony, the Easter Egg Hunt and the Park Fest in the summer.

These events are enjoyed by hundreds of Carmel people. The department also acts as a tourist information office at the Vista Lobos facility and assists many visitors to our town.

The Abalone Club is an adult support group for the Recreation Department and has given over 1,000 hours in volunteer time for community events. The Recreation Commission intends to ask the Abalone Club for continued assistance in fund-raising efforts.

Marion and Bob Fischer must be singled out as true supporters of the Recreation Department, and Marion has offered to assist in setting up a Friends of Recreation group.

Clearing up confusion

There seems to be some confusion regarding the roles played by the Carmel Youth Center and the Recreation Department. The Youth Center is a facility set up for use by young people over the age of 12. It has a director and offers programs for older youths. The Recreation Department established the Clubhouse Program for ages 8 to 11 as a response to parents whose children needed a drop-in center after school.

There is cooperation between the Carmel Youth Center and the Recreation Department for use of facilities for programs and events. During the course of the budget meetings there was an announcement that the Carmel Residents Association and the Northeast Neighbors plan to work on the improvement of the Vista Lobos facility.

The Recreation Commission appreciates the interest expressed by these community groups in making our facility more attractive as well as more useable.

Two of our most successful programs are Wednesday night bingo from 7 to 9 p.m., at Vista Lobos Park in J.O.'s Lumberyard Room, and Slot Trek Tours, which provides a variety of bus tours for older residents. Over the years, this group has visited Hearst Castle, Solvang and San Francisco theaters, and has taken five cruises as well as the enjoyable trips to Reno, Tahoe, Laughlin and Las Vegas. A very special part of Slot Trek is the Care and Share program that provides food baskets to the needy at holiday times. We also have an annual picnic, usually attended by 80 to 100 people.

Overseeing the Murphy

One of our latest projects has been the overseeing of the First Murphy House. The recreation coordinator works with a very fine volunteer group, the First Murphy Advisory Committee, which directs the many other volunteers who staff the house Monday through Friday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. This facility makes a wonderful place to visit with friends, read the mail or play a game of chess.

The Recreation Commission consists of six other members besides myself: Becky Allen, Bob D'Isidoro, Erik Dyar, Maxine Jennings, Pat Sippel and Merv Sutton. The commission meets at 3:30 p.m. at City Hall on the second Thursday of every month and encourages Carmel residents to attend its meetings. Public input is valued and each of the commissioners would be happy to hear suggestions and ideas for an improved department.

The outpouring of care and concern for our department at the budget hearings was very much appreciated. Mike Gorczyca, the coordinator, is pleased to know that so many people appreciate his efforts.

We would like to public to know that we are always in the market for volunteers; we need assistance for many of the events we oversee. We would also like to alert our citizens to our need for financial assistance.

Thanks again to all the folks who helped keep us going. We won't let you down.

Access not affected

EMERGENCY VEHICLE access to the south side of the Carmel River will not be affected during reconstruction of Rosie's Bridge, according to the Monterey County Office of Emergency Services and Public Works Department.

The reconstruction of the Esquiline Road bridge in Carmel Valley Village, is scheduled for July through November. Esquiline Road will remain open to traffic at all times during construction, which is expected to take between five and six months. The project includes the installation of a temporary detour around the construction site.

More information about the project can be obtained by calling public works at 755-4800.

Pachepus ceremony June 25

AN "EARTH Mandale" will be built at 11 a.m., Friday, June 25, at Pachepus on Tassajara Road in Carmel Valley.

The event is a ceremony for the Mother Earth that combines art, songs, drumming and prayer. The entire day will be devoted to the construction of a lasting Earth sculpture on sacred ground that radiates blessings out to the world, said Heather Secord, events coordinator for Window to the West.

Participants are asked to bring food to share and a donation for Window to the West. The gathering is open to all ages and cultures. For more information, call 626-9212 dictates all Carmel Valley residents should have access to hiking and riding trails.

She said there is not a provision in the proposed Cañada Woods project for access to the property's existing hiking and riding trail that traverses from Jacks Peak to the Carmel River.

Tony Lombardo, an attorney representing Alan Williams, owner of the Carmel Development Co., who is in charge of the Cañada Woods project, responded that the trail is separated by Carmel Valley Road and considered "extremely dangerous."

However, he said, the project's plan does provide trails that are called for in the county's general plan and the Greater Monterey County Area Plan.

In addition, Lombardo noted, the proposed Cañada Woods plan allows for a hiking and riding trail to the Carmel River from Carmel Valley Road, along the river, and additional access to the frontage property.

There are at least four other trail options from Jacks Peak to the Carmel River, he said. But, as far as crossing Carmel Valley Road at Cañada Woods on a horse, bike or on foot, he added, "We don't want to be part of a tragedy."

Strasser Kauffman said the developers were aware of the number of problems that are before them, which will be addressed in the application stage and at public hearings.

'Project Paw Print' provides big boost to SPCA

By SUSAN BECK

PROJECT PAW PRINT is the impetus behind the complete renovation of the animal shelter facility for the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals of Monterey County (SPCA).

The SPCA facility is located on Highway 68 between Monterey and Salinas. The property was donated by Claude Countess of Kinnoull and Gwendalyn May Sedlachek in 1967 to be used in perpetuity as a wildlife sanctuary and center for the humane care of animals.

Jim Bennett, community outreach manager for the shelter, said the SPCA was established in 1905 in Pacific Grove. He said the first shelter was a small house on David Avenue and Lottie Street in Monterey. "We think the SPCA is the oldest non-profit organization in Monterey County."

LYNN PHALAN-Dahmen, executive director for the SPCA, and Jim Bennett, community outreach manager for the shelter, show off an eight-week-old Boxer cross and a four-month-old Springer Spangel, who has a twin brother, in what is to be the new puppy wing. Both puppies have been adopted. (Susan Beck photo)

The SPCA must raise $403,000 to reach our Phase I and II goal of $1,404,000. Phase II includes the puppy and cat/kitten wing, dog kennels, lobby and administrative offices. Phase III, the multi-purpose room, will cost $145,000. The protective custody building, Phase IV, will take $215,000. The total goal of "Project Paw Print" is $1.8 million.

Lynn Phalan-Dahmen, SPCA's executive director for the past seven years, said the 26-year-old facility on Highway 68 was extremely rundown. She said despite a common belief, the SPCA is not a government agency. "We are not wealthy," she said. "We struggle and operate a $1.5 million yearly budget at a deficit. We are always looking for donations." Project Paw Print started construction about a year ago. The first two phases are expected to be completed within six to eight months.

The SPCA has raised donations and grants of more than $1 million toward the $1.8 million cost of the entire project.

The Harden Foundation has donated $150,000, which the SPCA matched. In addition, the Kinnuell Foundation contributed $300,000 toward the project, to be used primarily for a new lobby.

Phalan-Dahmen said an additional $380,000 is needed to complete the first two phases of the project, which cost $1,404,000.

The first phase includes: the remodeling of the dog kennel, electrical upgrades, new water-tight lighting, puppy wing, cat wing and two large play areas for kittens.

Additions in the second phase of the project include a large pet supply store, remodeled area for technicians and administration staff, euthanasia room, new outdoor holding area for large dogs plus a grooming room and a play yard.

Phalan-Dahmen said last year the SPCA handled 8,800 dogs and cats. Sixty-two percent of those animals were put to sleep. "It never seems to stop," she said. "It's constant."

One of the most significant reasons that the numbers don't decrease, said Phalan-Dahmen, is the reluctance to spay or neuter an animal. "I hear so frequently that people either want to breed, or they want to experience 'the miracle of life.' They also must deal with the tragedy of death."

Reducing pet overpopulation is one of the best way to cut down on the millions of unwanted pets that are euthanized each year throughout the world, said Phalan-Dahmen.

"Hopefully," she said, "we will put ourselves out of business. However, the purpose now is to alleviate and prevent animal suffering."

One option for people to participate in providing better care for homeless pets and improve the service to the community, said Phalan-Dahmen, is the Paw Print Pathway contribution campaign.

For $100 an individual can have their pet's paw print and name put into a cement block that will become part of a pathway throughout the SPCA property.

Major donors may still purchase rooms in the new shelter starting from $1,500 for small offices. A memorial dog kennel may also be purchased for $2,500.

These donors will be recognized on commemorative plaques displayed near the entrance of the sponsor room. Many donors are taking this opportunity to memorialize family members or pets, said Phalan-Dahmen. Pledges for gifts to be received at a later date of $250 or more will be recognized on a plaque in the new lobby. She said, "Every donor will be recognized."

Phase three and four of Project Paw Print include a community conference center, which will be used as a library for students, meeting room, basement for storage, and an additional protective custody building to house those animals who must be held for either a civil or criminal matter, or as a "bite case quarantine" for rabies control.

The SPCA provides several services to the community, including the animal shelter services, spay and neuter clinic, humane investigations, wildlife rehabilitation, humane education and a community outreach program.

Speaking for the 40 full and part-time people who work at the SPCA, Phalan-Dahmen said, "Everyone here knows that this is more than just a job. We do it for the animals."

Wildlife Center unique

By SUSAN BECK

THE GEORGE Whittell Wildlife Rescue and Rehabilitation Center has been a part of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals of Monterey County (SPCA) for 10 years.

The facility is located on Highway 68 between Monterey and Salinas.

Jim Bennett, SPCA community outreach manager, said the center is probably the only full-service, nonprofit wildlife organization of its kind between Los Angeles and Alaska. He said its annual budget is $180,000.

The wildlife center operates under permits from the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, the California Department of Fish and Game, and National Marine Fisheries.

But, said Bennett, "we receive no funding from these agencies. We count on donations to keep our doors open for wildlife in need."

An average of 3,500 wild animals are treated for release every year. Most of the animals are victims of "human intervention," said Bennett, such as habitat destruction, trapping, entanglement in plastic debris, poisoning, being hit by vehicles, injury from domestic animals, malicious harassment, and people who "adopt" or feed wildlife.

Among the animals that are treated are songbirds, sea and shorebirds, raptors, raccoons, possums, foxes, coyotes, deer, rabbits, squirrels, bobcats, sea lions, elephant seals, harbor, seals, otters, and reptiles.

All rescued animals recuperate in outdoor enclosures that look out onto natural areas similar to the habitat where they will be released.

As a hospital, the center is not open for public viewing. But SPCA members and friends can attend educational, guided walk-throughs.

The center is under the direction of Operations Manager Lisa Hoefler and Supervisor Melissa Caster. There is also a full-time animal care technician.

However, said Bennett, the facility is understaffed and relies on volunteers, who are trained to help staff rehabilitate the injured or orphaned animals.

CHS Fire...

the aftermath

CHS PRINCIPAL Marie Ishida was understandably disgusted as she surveyed the damaged science wing Sunday afternoon.

THREE CALIFORNIA Department of Forestry officials looked for clues Monday.

THIS IS what was left of the Associated Student Body meeting room and photography lab after an arsonist struck Carmel High early Sunday morning.

Cowboy poetry, art event lures 400 people

MORE THAN 400 people attended the Cowboy Poetry and Art Evening in Carmel Valley Friday, June 11.

The evening was part of the second annual California Cowboy Show, which was held at Hidden Valley.

This year's event was sponsored by the Carmel Valley History Society. Stew Clough, the show's manager and past president of the history society, said the cowboy poetry and art evening covered the cost for the rest of the show on Saturday and Sunday.

The weekend show was held under giant tents in Carmel Valley Community Park.

There were more than 30 artisans at the show with displays of paintings, photographs, boots, saddles, bits and spurs, books, blankets, horse-hair hitching, braiding and more.

CHS caps year with commencement, sober grad party

'Jurassic Park' comes to Carmel for grad party

By SCOTT BREARTON

WHEN PARENT organizers were planning Carmel High School's first all-night sober graduation party, they had no idea the premiere screening of Jurassic Park would coincide with their surprise theme.

During a special open house June 11, parents, administrators and community members got a sneak preview of the CHS gymnasium, which was completely transformed in the weeks prior to Grad Night 1993.

Entering the gym through a dark corridor, visitors marveled at the elaborate decor, including a 100-foot brontosaurus replica and pterodactyl hanging from the ceiling. There was also a "human bowling" alley, "grazing area" and video game room.

Other entertainment included a silent auction and raffle drawing, a hypnotist, outdoor beach volleyball and dancing to a live band and records spun by a hired disc jockey.

"This is my conception of it (Jurassic Park) after reading the book," said parent Patricia Lightfoot, head of the design committee.

According to Lightfoot, a professional graphic designer, parents began planning for the party last October, with most of the major work beginning in January.

"The parent volunteers are what really made this work," Lightfoot said. "We wanted this to be the party of their lives."

Patty Wilson, chairperson of the fundraising committee, said the City of Carmel and many civic organizations donated money to make Grad Night 1993 a success, as did CHS alumni and local recovery centers.

Carmel Mayor Ken White was on hand during the open house, sharing his thoughts about the importance of such an event:

"This evening is a massive attempt to put on a function that will interest students in spending the whole evening after graduation in a central spot, having a great time – instead of abusing alcohol and chemicals, and taking a chance on losing their life on the most important night of their life.

"We've lost kids in the past on graduation night," White added. "We just don't want that to happen this year."

Literally hundreds of local businesses and individuals also contributed by donating money or prizes for the party, according to Wilson, who noted that nearly $11,000 was raised.

"It's been a total community effort," Wilson said. "We hope it becomes a tradition at Carmel High School. All the groundwork has been laid for next year."

HEARING FACT NO.4

Eighteen million other Americans have the same problem.

More persons suffer with the loss of hearing than from diabetes, high blood pressureand arthritis combined. So, although you are special, your difficulty is not.

Yes. It is frustrating. Sometimes we get angry or depressed. But, hearing loss is not terminal. Be sure your Family Practice Physician knows about your hearing loss — however through surgery, medicine or from a hearing aid. If medicine or surgery is not your answer, you may benefit from a hearing aid. One of those new advanced, miniature hearing instruments that more and more people are wearing.

Carmel River safe again

THE MONTEREY County Health Department removed warning signs from the Carmel River, Tuesday, June 15, after test results showed the river water is no longer polluted with sewage, according to health department officials.

Carmel River was declared unsafe on June 1, after sewage flowing from a blocked pipe at the Carmel Rancho Shopping Center contaminated the water.

The recent tests found general coliform bacteria levels of 490 per 100 milliliters of water at the Carmel River bridge, which is below the standard of 1,000. The Carmel River lagoon's level of general coliform bacteria was 170.

After the sewage spill, the reported levels of human fecal bacteria reached 5,400. The new tests showed a level of 78 at the bridge and 40 in the lagoon.

CRA announces 'dining out' events

THE CARMEL Residents Association has scheduled its next three "dining out" events to coincide with stage performances at Carmel's Forest Theater.

The three dinner and show dates are:

- Thursday, June 17 for Carousel
- Thursday, July 29 for Lettice & Lovage
- Thursday, August 19 for Tom Jones

The evenings will begin with dinner, which is being catered by local restaurateur Káty Curry, at 6:30 p.m., to be followed by the stage performances at 8 p.m.

The cost for each dinner and show is $15/person. CRA members are welcome to bring guests.

Reservations can be obtained by calling Judy Thodos at 624-0866 or by mail to CRA, P.O. Box 13, Carmel, CA 93921. Checks should be made payable to "CRA Dines Out."

Businessman donates fax machine to police

THE CARMEL Police Department is now in the modern era — thanks to the private donation of a fax machine by a Carmel businessman.

"We've been trying to get a fax machine for a long time, but the city hasn't been able to afford it," said Carmel Det. Pete Poitras, expressing satisfaction the fax was installed Wednesday, June 16.

The police department wrote a letter of thanks to businessman William Agee for offering to donate a Ricoh facsimile machine to the department.

Group goes after bark beetles

A CITY-WIDE survey of bark beetle infestation in public Monterey Pine Trees will be conducted at 9:30 a.m. Wednesday, June 23, by Friends of Carmel Forest, a support group for the city's forest and beach department.

According to Steve Brooks, group president, volunteers will inspect all public pine trees on streets running north-south while the forestry staff will cover trees on streets running east-west.

Green ribbons will be tacked onto infested trees, Brooks said. Eradication of the beetles is scheduled for July.

"For several years, spring and summer attacks of bark beetle have resulted in the killing of many mature pines in Carmel," Brooks noted.

Bark beetles, Brooks said, are eliminated by digging after them with hammer and chisel followed by spraying to prevent further beetle attacks.

"An inexperienced person will often go after a pine moth or an old and abandoned beetle infestation and cause unnecessary and unsightly removal of bark," Brooks said. He added the pine moth doesn't affect the health of the trees.

Since the June 23 survey will cover only public trees, Brooks encouraged residents to inspect their private trees for signs of bark beetle. Residents desiring confirmation of suspected beetle infestation and help with eradication should contact Friends of Carmel Forest at 624-3208 or 624-7022.

Go barefoot in the park

IN A recent Dennis The Menace cartoon, Dennis, clad in bibbed jeans, striped T-shirt and jacket, swaggers out of a matinee and says to his buddies, "That was a good movie. I wonder if they'll make a book out of it?"

Hank Ketcham, one of our cherished resident stars, must have been considering the Dennis the Menace Benefit Screening and Celebration Party on June 24 when he wrote that one. The local premiere, presented by the Monterey County Film Commission, will start at Dennis the Menace Park in Monterey and end at Galaxy 6 Cinema.

It's a wonder how this handsome white-haired man continues to see through a preschooler's eyes when he doesn't have any grandchildren to prompt him. "None that I know of," he said in a recent interview.

"I don't bother to look through a child's eyes," he said. "I'd go crazy. I look through a child's point of view."

Instead, he considers what the world looks like to a tiny person. "It presents very interesting situations."

He said if you wonder what it's like to be small, the next time you go to a party, try getting down on your knees, knocking on the door and continuing on at that level.

"They have to talk someone into 'helping them reach the hors d'oeuvres... They're down under the couch with the spiders and kneecaps and hubcaps."

Or, he said try visiting home again and see that the long walk to school doesn't seem so long now. And the huge house we lived in isn't so big after all.

He also agreed with the pet theory I've harbored for most of my adult life: that the reason a year seems like eternity to a kid is because it's a large fraction of their total experience. However, at age 70, a year is merely one-seventieth of our lives. Thus, it goes by so fast it's hard to tell if we're just getting up or going to bed at night. Depressing. But I digress...

Ketcham said his cartoon arose in October of 1950 when he was living in Carmel Woods, and it first saw the light of day when published in March of 1951.

Thus, to avoid Dennis becoming a middle-aged baby boomer, Ketcham said every time the character blows out the candles on his sixth birthday, he magically becomes five again.

As for the little Tasmanian devil joining the modern world, Ketcham said all cartoons go through that metamorphosis. "Only the toys have changed," he said. "In the early days, when they didn't have the little bikes, he rode a tricycle... Now skateboards are part of his arsenal and TV is much more a part of family life... His relationship to the world still remains the same, though, as it does with all preschool-age children whose horizons are rather short."

When I asked him how he felt about the film's lead character, he said he's pleased with writer/producer John Hughes' choice of Mason Gamble. "He is a delightful child full of rambunctiousness... His father is an actor and his mother a teacher... He's a real kid and when they say, 'cut,' he becomes a six-year-old."

Ketcham agreed for Warner Bros. to do the picture only if they would deliver John Hughes, author of the chart breaking movie, Home Alone.

Ketcham, who shared all his printed material with Hughes, said, "I knew he was a Dennis-watcher and it didn't take him long to get the chemistry. When I saw the script I exploded with laughter and said, 'Let's get going.'"

After several gracious minutes of interview, in true Dennis the Menace style, Ketcham asked, "Can I go now?...

Ketcham actually has lots of contact with kids. Not only is he affiliated with the three child-oriented organizations that will benefit from the local premiere – the Boys and Girls Clubs of Monterey, Chartwell School and All Saint's School – but he wanted to keep tacking on organizations ad infinitum.

"We had to cut it somewhere or we'd be spreading ourselves too thin," said Teresa Del Piero, chairwoman of the event.

Warner Bros. has donated 100 posters, which will be signed by Ketcham, and sales of buttons and other memorabilia will also profit the three groups, with the rest going to the film commission.

Del Piero was one the three co-chairs of the highly successful screening of Unforgiven, and she will apply some of that knowledge to this premiere. For instance, get reservations confirmed early to prevent lots of last moment disappointment.

Preceding the screening, there will be a picnic in the park with music by junior musicians from the Monterey Jazz Festival. There will be clowns and a dressed-out Dennis (a youth volunteer) with whom you can take your picture. And the hope of hopes is that Walter Matthau, who plays Mr. Wilson in the movie, will show. Local merchants and hotels are offering bait to lure the stars, but no promises. They often cancel at the last minute.

Del Piero said this event is also a celebration of Ketcham. "This movie is really as he wants Dennis to be remembered: a precocious toddler."

She said the sequel is already being written because they don't want the little boy to age too much. And if all goes well, Warner Bros. will zoom into production in September.

Ketcham has asked that local service clubs collect donations so that disadvantaged children will be able to go to the movie after the local premiere. He knows what it might feel like to be the only kid on the block not to see it.

If you intend to attend the benefit screening, be sure to call the film commission office TOMORROW, Friday, June 18, at 646-0910. Tickets to the dinner and screening are $35. It starts at 5 p.m.

Also, don't dress up for this one. No ties or jackets are required – just tennies. And be prepared to play on the equipment if you are moved to do so.

Del Piero said she sees a lot of kid in Ketcham, especially when he visits Dennis the Menace Park, which he designed.

"If you could see him at the park," she said. "It's like his playground."

C'mon, let's go see...!

Doris Day's Best Friends

By Doris Day

Looking for love?

PEOPLE WHO love and adore Basset Hounds know that they are a very special breed. I've found that Basset owners are a very loyal group and once a Basset owner, always a Basset owner.

For those of you who feel that way — and I know you're out there — I want to tell you about two precious Bassets who need a home. They are father and daughter, four years and two years young, and they are an absolute delight. They must be placed together because they're extremely attached and never apart.

If you are familiar with this breed, you know that Bassets are sweet and lovable with excellent dispositions. If you aren't familiar with Bassets you should know that their solemn appearance, marked by heavy, drooping lips, deep-set eyes and long narrow head, belies their joyful, energetic nature.

So if you're looking for love, do yourself a favor. Call my friend, Donna Hagerty, at 625-6110. She is fostering this pair and when you meet them, I guarantee you'll fall in love. It's double the fun to have two so please, give Donna a ring and tell her I sent you. You'll be glad you did!

Hats off to Mobil Oil

The Mobil Oil refinery in Torrance deserves congratulations for handling a feral cat problem in a most admirable way.

A colony of approximately 100 wild cats lived at the refinery and it was felt they were creating a serious safety hazard for themselves and employees. A simple solution would have been to trap and euthanize them, but the Mobil folks proved they really care.

The company donated $25,000 to fund the building of a cat habitat in Kern County and to provide for the care and feeding of the cats. Working with the Los Angeles SPCA, the cats were trapped, spayed and neutered, and transported to their new home. This facility will be made available to other companies and is eventually expected to house up to 350 feral cats.

Funding by these companies and additional fundraising and volunteer activities will help ensure the long-term care of all the cats at the facility.

Thank you, Mobil Oil, for attempting to solve a widespread problem with your generosity and compassion.

See you next week!

(Written in collaboration with Judy Ruby, director, Doris Day Pet Foundation, Los Angeles).

Padre Sports Review

By James Genone

A year in review

AS SOME wise man once said, All good things must come to an end, — and thus ends another year of Padre Sports. And as always, this year has provided some great sports moments that will be remembered for a long time.

Spring sports

Just a few short weeks ago, the final season of sports ended for Carmel High when R.J. Powell finished his outstanding track season with a great effort at the state championships in the long jump. Powell, along with many other fine Padre athletes, enjoyed outstanding seasons, despite a small and inexperienced team. Underclassmen such as Bart Rowley, John Geisler, and Melissa May will be the backbone of what promises to be a strong team next year.

The Padre softball team had one of their most successful seasons in years, as they reached the CCS finals after putting on an outstanding performance all throughout the playoffs. Led by the strong pitching of Rebecca Pokrwzshinski, the Padre girls upset the top seed in the tournament before reaching the final game.

Padre Sports Review

The Padre boys swim team sent six swimmers to CCS after finishing second in league play behind Live Oak. Despite only eight members, the team boasted outstanding individual performers, as well as great relay efforts. Sophomores Mike Allaire and Steve Bonefant led the Padres in the MTAL finals by capturing first place in diving and the 500-free-style, respectively.

Carmel's golfers were another team that performed well, and they have bright hopes for the future with many team leaders returning next year. Following this year's second place finish, the Padres broke into the ranks of the MTAL golf contenders. Led by sophomore Todd Hoskins, as well as juniors Brandon Roberts, Matt Riegal, and Alex Vorobiov, Carmel High's golfers might actually be up to the almost impossible task of beating the always tough RLS team.

The Padre diamond boys had what many would call a tough season of baseball, but considering that they finished third, that's probably being a little pessimistic. Behind the strong pitching of Stanford-bound Mark Williams and the clutch hitting of league batting champion Jason Edwards, the Padres had many great wins this past season. While losing Williams and a number of other talented seniors will make things tough next season, Carmel always seems to find a way to plant themselves somewhere near the top of league standings. With talented players like Evi Plata and Justin Garza, next year should be no different.

Finally, the CHS tennis team enjoyed another contending season as they finished third in the MTAL. Top singles player Sevan Zenopian propelled the Padres to the strong finish, with Dan Silver, Josh Wiener, and Cooper Scollan helping the Carmel's cause. Head coach Dave Chaney was named MTAL coach of the year for his team's success.

Winter sports

This year's winter sports lasted a bit longer than usual, as both the boys and girls basketball teams kept things going in the playoffs. CHS's lady-hoopsters, led by Doreen (I got a full-ride to Washington State for basketball) Evans, were impressive all season as they annihilated most of their opponents on the way to the playoffs. Senior Erin Kraft and sophomore Jen Rosenthal stepped up for the Padres this year, as did Jamie Aldrich, Megan Martine, and Erin Murray. Exchange student Chie Ubuara did a great job as the teams point guard.

Not to be out-done, the girl's male counterparts also finished a great season in the playoffs. Led by junior point-guard R.J. Powell, this season was one to remember for the Padres. Powell, the league's MVP, was assisted by seniors Nate Stiles, Ben Fahrer, Ryan Edwards, Dean Wilson and Jason Lindgren. The team kept the always excitable Carmel crowd cheering for every swat, trey, and even the occasional thundering Powell dunk.

The Carmel High soccer team, despite a sub-par record, also boasted some great talent this year. Santiago Lozano, Jono Spaulding, and Adam Conway led the team, which should be much improved next season.

Sticks in hand, ready to bash anything that moved, the Padre field hockey team also played hard this season. Top players Allyssa Shannon, Lansi Brockmire, and Luna Suh will all be back next year to help the Padres.

Padre wrestlers gained a lot of experience this year as the young team prepared for next year. Led by MTAL champion Timber Trotter, the Padres got better with each match, and most of the team will be returning to play next season.

Fall Sports

Few will forget this past year's football season which featured a brand-new quarterback and a brand-new wide open offense. John Geisler, only a sophomore, took over the starting QB job, and his cannon arm saw that Padre receivers racked up lots of yards during the season. Senior receiver Sean Bohlje also provided Carmel fans with some spectacular moments as he hauled in Geisler bombs in dramatic fashion. Next year looks to be and exciting season as well, with JV standout Brent Carlson taking over the starting running-back job.

Repeating their performance from last year, this year's girls swimmers impressed their fans by capturing yet another MTAL title. Led by senior Amy Allard and junior Tisha Satow, the Padres dominated their opponents all year long. Next season should be no different as many Carmel swimmers are returning for another year.

The Padre aquajocks also had an outstanding year. Led by Robert Allaire and Nate Stiles, the Padres were tough to beat all season long. Next season should see the team doing more of the same as team leaders Kyle Nichols, Luke Ingram, and Micah Lande return to action.

Strong play by Bridget Bohnen and Megan Martine will be the difference for next year's girls volleyball team. Along with Robin Retherford, Bohnen and Martine put out great efforts this year on the way to a strong season.

Navare Bautista and Amie Reeder were the top players for this year's girls tennis team, which featured a ton of players who will battle it out for the top five spots and the two doubles teams next year.

Finally, Danielle Wall repeated as the MTAL's female long distance champ, and juniors Andy Cook and Jason Kistenmacher were much improved for the boys. Next year looks to be a good season with sophomores Melissa May and Bart Rowley coming into their prime.

Considering a school of only 650 students and no recruiting scholarships to offer, unlike some inter-league rivals (no names RLS and Palma), the Padres did an outstanding job this past year in the area of sports. No slackers on academics either, two varsity football players, Marc Garza and Cho Prassert, received awards for outstanding performance both on and off the field, and the starting center for the basketball team, Jason Lindgren, was this year's senior valedictorian.

As yet another season of Padre sports comes to an end, we can reflect upon the laughter and the tears of each lap, each point, and each individual and team effort as we salute the outstanding athletes at Carmel High School.

Editor's note: This is the final "Padre Sports Review" for the 1992-93 school year.

We need your help!

The SPCA of Monterey County receives an average of 635 dogs and cats each month. These animals come to us during their greatest time of need. In addition, the SPCA cares for hundreds of wild animals who are either orphaned or injured. They are rehabilitated and thgen released back into their natural habitat. Except for the contracts to shelter domestic animals, all funds needed to keep The SPCA in operation must be raised. The SPCA is a MEMBER run organization. You are invited to JOIN The SPCA with a minimum membership gift of $25. Without the support of our community, we cannot do what needs to be done to meet the demands of preventing cruelty to animals. For more information, call 373-2631, ext. 221. Thank you!!

Carmel Youth Baseball

By Pat Little

All-stars named as season closes

SUNSHINE, WHICH has been elusive all season, was the guest of honor at Carmel Youth Baseball's closing day on June 12. Bright blue skies and a mild breeze (just enough to fan the barbecue) were the order of the day as informal round-robin matches wound down to a gathering at John Lucido field for the ending ceremonies led by CYB president Mark Boitano.

Medals were presented to players on the winning team in each division. County Mounties, coached by Dave Parker and Bob Eggleston, took the honors for the Mustangs (ages nine and 10). Team members include Tim Day, Zarosh Eggleston, George Fontes, Ryan Melcher, Mike Oswald, Nick Pacitto, Evan Parker, John Perez, Rhett Petit, and Evan Smith. The top Bronco (ages 11 and 12) team was Portable Site Services with Matt Bedell, Brian Boitano, Trevor Fogg, Matt Grugel, Jason Haidar, Alex Holliday, Michael Horsley, Tommy Logan, Keven McFarland, William Ross, Nick Russo, Barton Vaughan, and Robby Wellington; Keith Fogg and Rob Wellington coached.

Girls' Softball – Rookie Division

In Girls' Softball, the Rookie division (ages nine and 10) medals were awarded to Amourette, coached by Joe Driscoll. Players are Angela Boyd, Lacy Davis, Josie Driscoll, Becky Kunitz, Jamie Larson, Brittani Parks, Amanda Phillips, Taylor Poncelet, Sarah Robinson, Sona Saroyan, and Candice Vega. Michael Green & Associates led the Minor division (ages 11 and 12). Chris Olow, Packy Porter, Chris Smith, and Steve Thomas coached. Team members are Dania Akkad, Molly Allan, Heather Brown, Whitney Emerson, Kally Green, Emma Healy, Justine McMahon, Christy Olow, Kinsey Pascoe, Courtney Porter, Heather Signorella, Sarah Smith, Kristen Thomas, and Kersten Wehde. Heading the Major division (ages 14 to 16) was Carmel Stamp & Coin with Lorraine Coke, Sarah Coombe, Kim Cresap, Shannon Dougherty, Michaela Hill, Laura McGowan, Erin Miller, Sandra Perez, Page Peterson, Nicole Robinson, Erin Scheicher, and Susan Webb; Dave Miller and Pat Stadille coached.

The Mustang all-stars were introduced by division director Wayne Wood. They include Andrew Arthur, Zarosh Eggleston, Ben Eichorn, George Fontes, Bryan Langslett, Trey Luster, Jez Munyer, Travis Moran, Mike Newman, Brian Orosco, Rhett Petit, Brett Smith, Patrick Thomas, and Corey Wood. Brent Fogg was named honorary member. The team will be coached by Wayne Wood, Dave Parker, and Joey Newman. Larson field will host all the Mustang all-star games this year from July 10-18. Schedules will be posted on the bulletin board at the field and elsewhere. Volunteers for the event are needed in all areas (ticket sales, concessions, etc.). Call Wayne Wood at 625-6797 if you can help out.

Bronco all-stars

Division director Keith Fogg called up the Bronco all-stars, who are Matt Bedell, Brian Boitano, Chris Cook, Dane Edmondsen, Trevor Fogg, Chris Foudy, Pat Greco, Austin Guest, Tyler Hansen, Jeff McGowan, Justin Noseworthy, and Hank Stoffers. Their coaches will be Keith Fogg, Mike Foudy, and Joe Stoffers. The Bronco all-stars are slated to play in Marina from June 23-27, in Monterey some time the week after July 4, and in the Pony League section tournament in Seaside on July 24-31, where the winner advances to the Bronco World Series.

This year Monterey will host the Pony League Bronco World Series at Jack's Park from August 12-18. Internationally, over 5,000 Bronco teams are competing to play in this event, representing four zones in the U.S., one in the Asia-Pacific, and one in the Caribbean. Monterey and another local team (will it be Carmel?) will compete in the World Series.

Director Dave Miller announced the Girls' Softball Major division all-stars, who are Chelsea Allen, Kim Cresap, Shannon Dougherty, Laura McGowan, Erin Miller, Angela Olow, Sandra Perez, Page Peterson, Nicole Robinson, Morgan Rogers, Jennifer Schock and Susan Webb. Sadie Thomas and Shyamala White are honorary members. Team coaches will be Dave Miller, Dave Cresap and Terry McGowan. The all-stars will play in Pacific Grove June 18-20.

The Girls' Softball Minor division all-stars were presented by director Chris Olow. They are Dania Akkad, Molly Allan, Cassy August, Chantal Curtis, Leila Curtis, Mandy Moran, Christy Olow, Kinsey Pascoe, Heather Signorella, Kristen Thomas, and Kersten Wehde. They will play July 2-4 in Monterey. Coaches are Chris Olow, Packy Porter, Steve Thomas and Todd Pascoe.

The final set of awards went to the champions of CYB's first and highly successful candy-sale fundraiser. Mark Boitano presented a gift certificate to organizer Toddy Olow. The grand prize for top sales went to Keith Sames. The first prize went to David Little, second prize to Anthony Kamm, and third prize to Keven McFarland. The four winners altogether sold close to 2,500 candy bars. Luke Perkins rode off with the prize bike in the drawing.

Summer clinics slated

In addition to all-star games, baseball aficionados can also partake of other baseball action this summer. Dean Wilson will conduct Saturday clinics for players ages six through 12 at Carmel Middle School on June 19 and 26, and July 3, 10, 17, and 24. There will be three two-hour sessions from 8 a.m. to 10 a.m., 10 a.m. to noon, and noon to 2 p.m. each day. The fee is $60 for six sessions, $48 for four sessions, or $15 per session. Wilson, who plays on Monterey Peninsula's Black Sox traveling all-star team, has an extensive baseball background. For more information, call him at 626-8023.

The more laid-back player might like to check out the "sandlot" baseball three mornings a week at Larson field during July and August for players ages seven through 10. For a $5 fee to CYB to cover insurance, participants can hone their skills in small groups and join in informal games for fun. Call Dick McGonigal at 659-2813 to enroll or to volunteer to coach.

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

Employees of companies with 401(k) retirement plans may have new choices to make under new rules of the U.S. Labor Department. In 401(k) plans, an employee can regularly put a limited amount of pay into his or her retirement account. Most companies also contribute. Contributions and earnings are not subject to income tax until withdrawn. The new rules let employers widen the choices employees can make among investments for their individual accounts. Also, the new rules may allow more frequent changes between investment choices.

"I had a hard time getting through school...had to work the whole time," he told an interviewer. The childness widower lives comfortably on his postal pay. their regular meetings. That room, which also housed the school's photography lab, was destroyed by fire. An adjacent life science classroom and chemistry lab also sustained significant damage, according to Ishida.

"Door was open"

"Basically, the whole room ignited at one time," Stacy said, noting evidence indicates that whoever deliberately set the fire had gained entry to the ASB meeting room.

"The first unit to arrive there was a sheriff's deputy," Stacy said, "and he indicated that the door was open when he arrived."

Additionally, Stacy said the hinge side of the door was severely charred. "The only way that could've happened is if the door was open," he said.

Carmel Unified School District President Frank Pinney said he was "sad and angry" upon hearing the grim news.

"A lot of young people are going to wind up having their school schedules screwed up because of some selfish individual or group of individuals," said Pinney, who is also chief of the Big Sur Volunteer Fire Brigade. "It's a cowardly, stupid, senseless crime. There's no redeeming value in it at all."

"I would absolutely hope that it's a non-student," Pinney added. "I would wish that none of our students would've done this."

According to Sheriff's Department officials, the fire was reported at 4:43 a.m. Sunday, June 14, by a resident who saw smoke rising from the campus.

Ishida said she received a phone call from the Sheriff's Department at 5 a.m. At 5:45 a.m., she arrived at the school to find part of the science wing engulfed in flames.

"The longer I think about it, the madder I get," she said.

Ishida said at one point there were 12 different fire engines at the scene, including firefighters from Carmel Valley, Mid Valley, Carmel Highlands, Pebble Beach, Carmel, Rio Road and the California Department of Forestry.

Ishida said she believes whoever started the fire had gained entry to the building: "They were inside. It's hard to know because the windows were blown out when the firefighters arrived and the door was open."

Ishida said she also discovered three windows in the administrative wing broken out Sunday morning, including two in her office and one in her secretary's office.

Ishida said she believes whoever started the blaze chose the science wing because it is centrally located on campus and not easily seen from the highway or adjacent homes.

"They may have been foolish enough to expect it would be contained in just that room."

Ishida was doubtful that the classrooms could be rebuilt in time for the 1993-94 school year.

"We need to assess if these classrooms can be remodeled. They're not going to be ready before August," she added, noting that classes may be moved to another wing until work is completed.

Ishida said administrators are also considering the possibility of setting up portable classrooms to house the photography and science classes in the interim.

For the teachers whose classrooms were destroyed in the blaze, Ishida said it was "a real slap in the face."

"I'm in a strange state of shock," said Linda Mowbray, a part-time photography teacher at CHS, who expressed her sense of loss Monday. "It's really unsettling for me. The darkroom is gone."

Mowbray said she was particularly disappointed because the photography program has been so successful and popular among students.

"Really devastating"

"It's going to be really devastating because it's not going to be back in full swing by September," said Mowbray, who has been at CHS for five years. "It doesn't sound like this building is going to be remodeled for a long, long time."

The fire-damaged classrooms will undoubtedly change district priorities, which recently have been focused on developing a long-range plan for its facilities needs.

"From a planning perspective, I see it as a definite disappointment, but it's not a setback," Pinney said. "It's just going to be that much harder to keep up the schedule that we've set for improvements that the School Facilities Task Force has recommended."

Stacy asked that anyone with information about this crime call him at his King City office, 385-5412, or the Monterey County Sheriff's Tip Line, 373-3344.

"We want to catch these guys," he said.

Baldwin remains optimistic in face of arson fire's damage damaged four classrooms at Carmel High School.

Board members stressed the identity of the person providing information will be considered confidential and will not be made public.

Anyone having information should call the Sheriff's Tip Line at 373-3344.

The reward was made public at an emergency CUSD board meeting held Tuesday, June 15, to address the immediate concerns in the wake of the CHS fire.

The special meeting began with a report from CUSD Superintendent Vance Baldwin, who estimated damage to the CHS science wing at somewhere between $500,000 and $1 million.

Whether or not the building can be salvaged is still in question, according to Baldwin.

"The adjuster and one architect who looked at it yesterday did not feel it would have to be torn down," Baldwin said.

He did note, however, that the state architect would be visiting the school site next week, and might offer a different opinion about the whether the building could be saved.

But Baldwin tried to remain optimistic.

"Let me tell you about the good news," he said. "We have an opportunity, from this fire, to build a state-of-the-art science wing." Baldwin hinted that the new science wing would be "a model for what the rest of the school should look like."

Baldwin expressed gratitude to all the emergency personnel who played a part in dousing the blaze.

"We have nothing but admiration and appreciation for the fire departments that responded," he said.

Baldwin also noted that the district has received an "outpouring of support" from students and community members who called to ask what they could do to help in the days following the Sunday morning fire. He mentioned that a trust account has been established through Friends of Carmel Unified Schools (FOCUS), a CUSD fund-raising group.

Baldwin reported that the district is well-insured, for everything from the structure and its contents to security and cleanup costs. The district will pay a $1,000 deductible under its self-insured Joint Powers Agreement with other school districts.

"That insurance program is a good one," he said. "The coverage is good and the cost is good."

Baldwin said California Department of Forestry officials have completed their initial arson investigation and cleanup of the damaged wing is expected to begin next week.

When asked to characterize what stage the arson investigation was in, Baldwin declined to comment, but said he was "impressed with their efforts."

Administrators hope to have the classrooms reopened by Jan. 1, 1994. In the meantime, the district is exploring its options, such as reorganizing classes to accommodate displaced students, or bringing in one or two portable classrooms for the fall semester.

"It's a little bit of a downer," Baldwin said, "but we're already thinking about that new science wing."

Ceramics building was lost in '81 fire

THE LAST destructive fire at Carmel High School demolished the ceramics building, a wooden structure valued at $30,000.

The fire broke out early Tuesday morning, Dec. 8, 1981. Ten California Department of Forestry (CDF) firefighters battled the blaze for 45 minutes as it reduced the 40-year-old building to a rubble.

CDF investigator Don Stacy found an electrical switch box connected to a kiln, which he believed to have short-circuited and caused the fire.

Although the school district's insurance covered the loss, the reimbursement of $30,000 was not adequate enough to rebuild the ceramics facility.

FOCUS creates fire-relief fund for Carmel High

FRIENDS OF Carmel Unified Schools (FOCUS) has established a bank account to receive donations from alumni, students, parents and friends who wish to help in the rebuilding effort at Carmel High School in the wake of the June 13 fire.

The account, aptly named "Carmel High School Fire Fund," was recently opened at Monterey County Bank, according to Barry Kilzer, FOCUS president.

The fund will be used to augment the Carmel Unified School District's insurance coverage and assure that new facilities will be state-of-the-art, according to Kilzer. All funds donated to the Carmel High School Fire Fund will be used only for that purpose.

William Doolittle, a CHS Alumnus and one of the founders of FOCUS, originated the idea for the fund and was its first contributor with a check for $1,000.

"I think there are a lot of alumni who would want to contribute," Doolittle said.

The account has been opened at the Carmel Rancho branch of Monterey County Bank, located on Via Nona Marie across from the Rio Road post office. Donations may be made directly at the bank by contacting Sherry Cerda at 625-4300. Checks can be mailed to FOCUS, P.O. Box 222211, Carmel, CA 93922.

This fund raiser is a cooperative effort between FOCUS, Carmel High Athletic Boosters and Padre Parents. Donations earmarked for the fire relief fund that are made to any of these groups will be deposited into the joint account.

Additional contacts are Kilzer, 624-7783; Jim Kistenmacher (CHS Athletic Boosters), 626-4002; and Anne Tescher (Padre Parents), 624-7224.

New series crafted by Carmel's culture chief

By JOHN DETRO

CELEBRATED ACTOR Christopher Plummer in a one-man show will open Performance Carmel's 1993-94 season, City Cultural Director Brian Donoghue announced today while making known the whole series.

Plummer's original presentation — called "a somewhat personal stroll through the literature I have long loved" — will be seen locally on Oct. 23 of this year.

Other series participants included Margaret Jenkins and Rinde Eckert (dance duos and solos), DynamO Theater, Women of the Calabash, R. Carlos Nakai and Jackalope (Native American musical traditions plus contemporary jazz), Seattle Mime Theater and the Nuclear Whales saxophone group.

The Edlos ("bad boys of a capella") will be brought in for a special non-series event on Dec. 11.

Subscription information and brochure? Call 624-3996. Three series prices are available — and single tickets as well.

"Our subscription base audience seems to be extremely loyal," Donoghue told The Pine Cone. "We're confident we have delivered what we promised — contemporary reinterpretation of traditional ideas and art forms. The response has been very fine. We're happy."

He said last season's closer — Slow Fire by composer Paul Dresher and Eckert — drew telephone calls of thanks from some who'd been in that audience. "Such calls are as unusual as they are gratifying," Donoghue added.

The executive said all the 1993-94 artists had "elicited a visceral response in me. Many programs concern themes ancient in origin and transcendent in meaning."

Every program starts at 8 p.m. on a Saturday. The full slate:

• Oct. 23 — Plummer's evening. He has starred in stage productions for Broadway and London's West End. Films, TV work, recordings — all have contributed to his reputation as one of the planet's great actors.

• Nov. 20 — Nuclear Whales Saxophone Orchestra. Based in Santa Cruz, these five players use seven sizes of saxophones and more than seven octaves to play everything from Duke Ellington to Aaron Copland and original material.

• Dec. 11 (non-series) — The Edlos offering their Christmas show. "Performance Carmel believes," Donoghue said, "that sometimes innovation is just pure fun."

• Jan. 29 — DynamO Theater with The Challenge. Combines acrobatic movement choreographed to an original score with clowning, juggling and masks. The group was founded in Quebec in 1981. This work expresses the drives of adolescence. "Young people and families welcome."

• Feb. 26 — Women of the Calabash. The three-person vocal and percussion ensemble performs music from Africa, Latin America, the Caribbean and Black America. Recently they have played Lincoln Center and Brooklyn Conservatory of Music.

• March 19 — Seattle Mime Theater. Donoghue: "It combines flawless technique with an exuberant sense of fun, resulting in theater pieces that satisfy devotees of mime and lovers of contemporary theater."

• April 9 — R. Carlos Nakai and Jackalope. Native American flutist Nakai prepares audiences for the ensemble's "improvisatory expressions of post-Columbian pre-jazz of the native peoples of the Americas."

• May 14 — Jenkins and Eckert in Walks Near the Water. "Dances pieces featuring two brilliant artists performing recently commissioned work."

Donoghue finished: "Sunset Center is so committed to the need for and importance of this series, we are offering tickets at a particularly low price. To make the programs accessible to a wide range."

THE COLORFUL gang from GroveMont will open their 10th annual Monterey Bay Theatrefest on Saturday, June 19, and continue these seasonal frolics every weekend through Aug. 1.

Sites for the free public entertainments: the Custom House Plaza and Memory Garden at the top of Fisherman's Wharf in Monterey.

GroveMont's outreach program again will put forth elements which have made Theatrefest extremely popular with locals and tourists alike — Human Chess Game, Fairy Tale Theater, Shakespearean drama, musical review.

The opening weekend (June 19-20) will include the Monterey Bay Arts and Crafts Fair with more than 100 booths, face painters, musicians, fortune tellers, so on. This will return over the closing weekend too.

The 1993 edition involves more than 60 actors, actresses and technicians. The daily schedule: Mary Lee Sunseri singing with children from 11:30 to noon, Fairy Tale Theater from noon to 1 p.m., Human Chess Game from 1 p.m. to 2 p.m., musical review 2 p.m. to 3 p.m.

Shakespeare's Henry VI opens at 3:30 p.m. Saturday, June 26, in the Memory Garden. (The second part of the Plantagenets Trilogy — Edward IV — will open at the Monterey Playhouse on July 10. Part three — Richard III — will be in the repertory for the 1993 Carmel Shakespeare Festival.)

GroveMont founder Stephen Moorer directs Henry VI with Jeffrey T. Heyer in the title role. Other cast members: Jerry Gill, Mark Shilstone, Nina Capriola, Ron Cohen, Michael Jacobs, Bill Logan.

Players: Kevin Caston, Denise Clifford, John Farmanesh, Jeff Heyer, Julie Hughett, Maryann Schaupp.

The Human Chess Game always has stage combat, bad puns, great entertainment value. For the musical review, these vocalists will draw songs from Theatrefest's past — Susanne Burns, Edward Griggs, Olga Legan, David McMillen, Maryann Schaupp, Amy Washburn. Look for dancing as well.

"This Theatrefest," says Moorer, "looks and feels like the best one yet."

Outdoor Summer Festival coming this weekend

By JOHN DETRO

ITS AS much a part of this season as young love and watching while the moon glimmers above Carmel Bay.

The fourth annual Outdoor Summer Art Festival will be held at Sunset Center on June 19-20 — from 10 a.m. until 4:30 p.m. Saturday and 11 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Sunday.

The 1993 edition will consist of 75 local artists offering their wares along with this theme: "Fine art at affordable prices." Those participants were selected by judges from Carmel Art Association and "all will be in attendance," according to Event Coordinator Joan Vandervort.

Work — "all original and signed" — will range in price from $10 to $1,000. Pieces may be framed or unframed.

Admission to the grounds is free. Media involved: watercolor, oil, acrylic, serigraph, lithograph, monoprint, drawing, photography, etching, sculpture, collage, reverse glass. Some of the makers—

Watercolor: Lana Price, Phil Bleicher, Sally Jorgenson, Bobbie Osterdock. Sculpture: Elise Cjezem, Malcolm Moran, Peggy Alonas, Ania Malkowska.

Oil and acrylic: Delia Bradford, Cyndra Bradford Nelson, Robert Hewitt, Bob McClung, Cindy Talbott. Photography: Peter McArthur, Brian Roseth, Craig Lovell, Patrick Brown.

Ribbons will be awarded in seven major categories. Carmel Art Association will furnish three judges.

Providing beautiful sounds both days will be the band called Kashwa. The six members render songs from Peru, Bolivia and Ecuador.

Food will be available with Friends of Sunset serving lunch on the patio.

ZANTMAN ART Galleries of Carmel will hold a three-hour public reception for still life painter Dorothy Fitzgerald starting at 3 p.m. Saturday, June 19, in the newly-remodeled space at Sixth and Mission (next to the fire station).

Following that special event, her exhibit will stay up through early July.

It's all new work. "For nearly two decades," program notes say, "visitors to Zantman Galleries have been delighted by her choice of subjects, compositional skills and use of the chiaroscuro technique by which objects seem to emerge from the darkness."

And: "Equally remarkable is her ability to reproduce surface textures — the smoothness of a copper pan, the soft fuzz of a peach, the crackly crispness of an onion skin."

Fitzgerald has taught oil painting for many years throughout Northern California. In 1984, she became director of San Jose's Westview Art School. She has had numerous one-woman shows.

CAROL CHAPMAN will be spotlighted at an opening and reception at Places in the Sun in The Crossroads — 114 Crossroads Blvd.

Interested persons are invited to drop by and meet her between 4-7 p.m. on Friday, June 18. The show includes her latest work (pastel landscapes, steel sculpture) and will run through July.

"Carol has expanded into a new arena of softer color," says venue owner Barbara Venji, "depicting peaceful climes."

JOANNE AND Will Light of Pebble Beach are showing watercolors and oils through June 30 at Carmel Valley Manor Hallway Gallery.

A NEW exhibit by photographic artist Richard Garrod and a changed exhibit by presently exhibiting sculptor Ken Wiese will open on Sunday, June 20, and continue through Aug. 1 at Monterey College of Law (404 Franklin).

The college gallery is open to the public from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Thursday.

Garrod has taught photography workshops for more than two decades. His work has appeared in several photography publications and in more than 50 solo or group exhibitions.

Wiese has lived in Carmel for 40 years and was a teacher in Carmel Unified School District for 35. He studied privately with Carmel Valley sculptor Alexander Weygers. His work is shown at galleries throughout this country and is collected privately in the United States, Europe, Asia.

Review/Rock opera

Audience likes tale of backwoods American strife

By MATTHEW FRIDAY

WELCOMED IN a reception sponsored by radio stations KAZU and KPIG, the multimedia rock opera Sid Allen and the Devil's Den opened for an enthusiastic audience at GroveMont's Lighthouse Theater (the New Monterey venue) on Friday.

Written by poet, composer and producer Tom Harvey, the opera offers the talents of seven performers in a very hot rendition of Americana, based on events in the backwoods burg of Matewan, Virginia, circa 1912.

The plot revolves around family alliances among the spunky and individualistic Allen clan, and a suddenly exaggerated conflict with the powers-that-be in what should've been a simple local election.

It turned into a hazing, political betrayal, a mockery of justice and, ultimately, a courthouse gunfight that would leave the well-known and fun-loving Allen family decimated, jailed or executed. It is a true story, and its effects still linger in the minds of many — including locals, political historians and, now, artists.

Or so this current generation of rock aficianados, opera buffs and literateurs may decide. So the Santa Cruz scene has long since decided.

Blending elements of blues, jazz, twanging Good Ol' Boy country and genuine hair-raisin' dance-hall rock, Harvey has cast the story as a live concert performance. Scant dialogue between the musicians shapes the listener's ear, reinforces the effectiveness of rock — and a bit of balladic country — in carrying the rage, tenderness, vitality and fire of the storyline.

Five microphones

The show opens with five microphones poised expectantly in a darkened hall. The drums are raised on a platform at the back of the stage behind what appears to be a large, unattended bar to one side (a keyboard, it will serve, ironically, the functions of bar, choir stall, and judge's bench).

Already in the character of Sid Allen, Harvey introduces the show, provides a brief sense of setting and invites the seated audience to dance (where space allows) in response to the music, and as "an expressive resolution of drama." In the first case it is natural — the music is excellent; in the second it is hypnotic: one is outraged by the monolith of deceit and hypocrisy raised against the Allens, and the tragic outcome, then laid out by Harvey's sensitive denoument and the triumph of justice.

Strong work

Strong performances from each musician/actor include Michael Van Landingham's Wesley who, playing guitar, lap steel and mandolin, presents a youthful and rhapsodic lover — his voice smooth as liquid amber: all summer, languid and suggestive. Faintly reminiscent of the Grateful Dead's Bob Weir, Van Landingham delivers an alternately energetic musical accomplishment and a misty, romantic tone in young Wesley.

Playing the female roles of Maude (Wesley's girlfriend), back-up, and choir soloist, Mary Hallisey brings a sweet, clear underlay to the overtly masculine character of the show. In sometimes difficult competition with the instrumentation, she provides the perfectly balanced siren call of a temptress, the plaintive, haunting voice of indecision, and the church's distant crisp soprano. She is by turns an undulant weaver-of-spells, a woman — wistful and mature — and girl upon whose decisions her lover's family and their lives may come to rest while she watches them turn into outlaws.

Joe Munda on electric bass brings bedrock to the production. Heavyset and driving, bear-wild or rock solid when it's called for, his Floyd Allen (brother to Sid) surprises with drawling forcefulness. Conversely, Jason Edward Davies — a personable and versatile musician — gives us a character necessarily nasty and seedy. You almost hiss with his antsy prancing in the role of antagonist: Detective Felts.

Tom Harvey's gaunt, honest and individualistic Sid is matched in the adversarial snake-oil sermon of his equally gaunt but rapacious Preacher Garland. Paul Smith on keyboard is sharp, snapping at the guitars, vibrant or riverine with the mood, from shoot-out to train car clatter and wishful lingering upon the stars.

On drums and percussion, Tony Munda establishes and maintains the group's coherency, underlining the sense of set; punching, flexing and shaping each piece.

Besides some favorite songs — Summer in Virginia, In the Mines, Corn, Few Honest Men, One Wish, To the Stars and Devil's Den itself — there are terrific tunes with epic poetry and literal history. An interesting if easily overlooked adjunct, video montages run constantly, gorgeous or in ironic parallel to the script. A few special effects provide atmosphere and context.

This is a classically American story — alcohol, guns, individuality, politics, justice, romance and family values. It is also vintage, pulsing rock 'n' roll.

Playing Fridays, Saturdays and Sundays through July 4 at 320 Hoffman, New Monterey. Doors open at 8 p.m. on Fridays and Saturdays (show at 9 p.m.) and 7 p.m. Sundays. Call 655-3200 for tickets.

Mozart in Monterey efforts inspire admiration

By NATHALIE PLOTKIN

MOZART IN Monterey is back in town to celebrate its seventh season. Founded by Maestro Oleg Kovalenko in 1986, it has always consisted of a series of chamber music recitals and orchestral concerts.

Given the difficulties with resources and organization to put Mozart in Monterey together each year almost from scratch, I have to admire the efforts, the courage and the dedication of the people who make it all happen and keep it alive. It is never easy.

Friday night, the inaugural concert at the Santa Catalina Center for the Performing Arts zeroed in on youthful works by young composers which were specifically designed for chamber orchestra.

Most fittingly, the evening led off with Mozart, who at the age of 16 wrote the Divertimento in D Major K. 136 for strings. An amazingly mature work. Maestro Kovalenko endowed it with unusual importance by his use of a wide ranging dynamic palette.

Very few markings

He made it even more remarkable by the fact that very few dynamic markings are actually present in the current editions of the music, though the Maestro assures us they exist in the manuscripts. The playing was crisp and attentive and the results were most attractive.

Flutist Paul Renzi and harpist Douglas Rioth joined forces in Mozart's Concerto for Flute and Harp in C Major K. 299 written when the composer was 22 years old. A delightful work in the best French "galanterie" style.

The charm of the solo passages was expertly and virtuosically extolled. There were balance problems between the heavy orchestral accompaniments and the delicately elegant flute and harp tone. The cadenzas were splendid and the Entracte by Ibert played as an encore was a delightful treat.

Careful conception

Samuel Barber's Adagio for Strings (he was 26) was carefully conceived with well shaped phrasing utilized for an intellectualized interpretation.

Finally, the most mature work on the program was the 34-year-old Dvorak's Serenade for Strings in E Major Op. 22. A rich and flavorful symphonic composition, its five movements were traversed with a tinge of timidity and roughness which probably would have been eliminated by more rehearsal time. But this is the bane of so many musical events.

Proceedings continued on Sunday night. The highpoint of the program was the 21-year-old Mozart's Serenade No. 7 in D Major K. 250 which, lasting over an hour, incorporates symphony, concerto and dance forms.

The superior violin soloist was concertmaster William Barbini. After a very well played orchestral opening Allegro, Barbini stepped forward in the finest virtuoso concerto fashion to take command of some particularly lovely music.

(The last chamber concert on Thursday, June 17, will present works for piano (four hands) played by Mark Westcott and Carolyn Pope Kobler. Ticketing: 648-3592.)

Strong items

BOOKS OF local origin continue to come on with strength.

Carmel-based photographer S. Beth Atkin will make another appearance in support of her Voices from the Fields: Children of Migrant Farmworkers Tell Their Stories.

She will sign copies at Pacific Grove's Mulberry (169 Fountain) from 1-3 p.m. Sunday, June 20. That store is an outlet for children's literature.

The photos are dramatic in their directness. Beth's interviews with nine of the youngsters could hardly be more compassionate and clear-eyed at the same time — not an easy line to walk.

Moreover, a children's writing project produced the poems which appear here in both Spanish and English.

You'll learn much about how life goes for farmworker kids — the hard labor, hopes, dreams, language barriers, discrimination, sudden moves, school days, family bonds, pride of heritage.

This beautiful title was published by Little, Brown and Co. It costs $16.95.

Self-expression

Meanwhile, the peninsula's Elizabeth Murray has inspired a healthy buzz over her new book from Pomegranate Press in Petaluma. It's called Painterly Photography.

You'll likely remember Elizabeth as author of the best-selling Monet's Passion: Ideas, Inspiration and Insights from the Painter's Gardens (Pomegranate, 1989). She worked as a gardener at Claude Monet's Giverny estate for about a year in 1985, returning there annually to photograph the gardens again and again. (These shots, in turn, are published annually in calendars.)

The latest Murray title shares a unique photo-painting technique that will help readers answer their muses and create beautiful, personal compositions that are alive with light and color.

Offering 63 of her own tender images — peaches and roses washed by sunlight, copper pots against blue tile, on and on — Murray reveals the full potential of the technique.

She suggests which cameras, instruments and materials to use, and explains each step of the process — manipulation of the fluid emulsion, enlarging photo images, painting on them. All the while, she demonstrates a special ability to inspire readers with the spirit of experimentation and the joy of making.

Kelly chapbook

Carmel poet Nancy Joan Vernon Kelly has a worthwhile chapbook on sale at Carmel Coffee and Tea Company ($10 per copy). Title: Singing Warrior. And she'll be part of a public poetry reading there from 6:30-9:30 p.m. on Thursday, June 17.

The pieces are short, shiny, piercing. They strike the heart like monastery gongs or sudden bird cries — never broken, ever complete no matter how curt. Here's her title poem:

Child's joy/
Sickles a
Path

Wild hearts

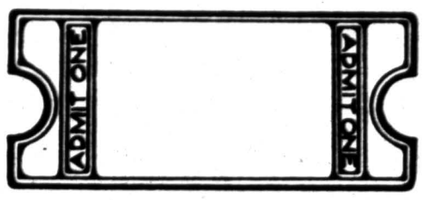
Review/Theater

Forest group provides handsome entertainment

By JOHN DOTSON

IN THE Forest Theater Guild's production of Carousel, over 50 performers appear on-stage including more than 25 in the chorus, supported by an orchestra of over 20 members and a crew of nearly 30.

This is community theater, and Director Hamish Tyler, who is also President of the Guild, masters all the multiplicities in an occasion of generous entertainment that is reliably rhythmical and handsomely accomplished. The steady hands of Stage Manager Colleen Finegan, Music Director Kerry Thompson and Chorus Director Linda Purdy are also evident in keeping this ambitious production on course.



The existing ambiance of the Forest Theater stage harmonizes well with the musical's setting in coastal New England in June, 1873 ("June is Bustin' Out All Over"). An immediate pleasure is the multi-layered visual concept of Set Designer Carey Crockett that amply holds and focuses the energy through the lengthy evening. Lighting Designer Charles Houghton plays his hues effectively off Crockett's structures, and costumes by Designer Margaret Voss lend vibrance to place.

Impressive achievement

Carousel is a venerable vehicle for an array of substantial musical talents, and each of the 12 major songs — without exception — is impressively achieved. The soprano of Phyllis McChesney (as Carrie Pipperidge) and the mezzo soprano of Linda Purdy (as Julie Jordan) richly satisfy. Buzz Baker sings the journey of protagonist Billy Bigelow with confident art and craft.

Stephi Waldrip (Nettie Fowler), Bill Wilkinson (Enoch Snow), Barbara Kinney (Mrs. Mullin) and James Kinney (Jigger Craigin) all bring refined depths and resonances to their roles.

Keith Decker's poised work (as David Bascombe) provides necessary and essential dramatic continuity. And among the chief enchantments of the entire evening is the wonderful presentation of the child (Louise Bigelow) by Evans Dowlen.

No disappointment

Everyone I know comes to classic musical theater expecting something lighter in tone and amusing, and those who bring this expectation to the Forest Theater will not be disappointed. Still, given the seriousness and danger of our transitional times, I was drawn into the story with an eye toward something of a compensating shadow for all the lightness, a darkening to balance the levity. And for those who are interested, there are some nuances worth considering.

Carousel advanced the modern era of musical theater, appearing on Broadway in the world-historic year of 1945. Richard Rodgers composed the music to Oscar Hammerstein's lyrics, taken from Benjamin Glaser's adaptation of a play, Liliom, written by Ferenc Molnár in 1909, five years before World War I. The events depicted span the two decades before the Gay Nineties.

The underlying motif is something about sexual intrigue and collective values in industrial New England, where "good sense" includes such notions as, "A man's gotta make plans for his life and stick to 'em," and "doing well," centering in the (male) urge to reproduce (him)self both in human progeny and business proficiency — "bringin' in more and more and more."

The clambake suggests something of the unwieldy union of Eros and Free Enterprise in the American Dream. June busts out all over while the mechanical carousel spins in vague — nearly opaque — but haunting reveries of spring's orphic revelries. Originally, the carnival was the Orgy of Spring, the union of Sun God with Mother Earth encouraging the forces of regeneration.

And for those who want to follow this through, the supplemental summer reading that suggests itself to me includes the darkening meditations of Molnár's original Liliom, and of Shirley Jackson's short story, "The Lottery." Robertson Davies' rum novel about community theater, Tempest Tost, also comes to mind.

Whatever the context one may choose for holding the images, for an evening of luminous theatrics and the luscious tones of Rodgers and Hammerstein, this production is a very nice clambake indeed.

Jazz Tides

Leonard's view

HE'S THE dean of jazz critics. He quit reviewing Monterey Jazz Festival (MJF) in 1983 due to what he called predictable programming. Leonard Feather today holds quite a different opinion of the 1993 edition.

Tim Jackson enjoys his first full-charge year as MJF's new general manager (founder Jimmy Lyons co-produced the 1992 fest before retiring). It felt like a good idea to call Feather and check out his reactions to the talent lineup announced by Tim many weeks ago.

"Yes," Leonard said over the long distance wire from his home in Sherman Oaks, "I get material from (MJF spokesperson) Paul Fingerote and know what's happening there this year. I think Monterey has been upgraded and updated — vastly improved."

Because of prior commitments, he said, the venerable writer will not be able to cover MJF come September. "I wish I could. It seems as if there's a festival every week. I've already said I would be at New York (the JVC Festival) and Montreal. It's simply a matter of available time. I would love to be at Monterey."

Finally: "The new man does a good job. The updating means that Monterey is keeping up with what's going on in the music."

Where and when

Monterey Bay Blues Festival has announced the order of service for next weekend's eighth annual bash at the fairgrounds. You may wish to clip-and-save—

Saturday afternoon, June 26: Sensational King Bizkit Blues Band from England, Nathan Williams and the Zydeco Cha Chas, Deanna Bogart, Neville Brothers.

Saturday evening, June 26: Chris Cain Band, Clarence Carter, B.B. King.

Sunday afternoon, June 27: Barbara Morrison, Dorothy Moore, Charles Brown, Ruth Brown, Etta James.

Tickets for the arena's rear portion are available at Seaside/Sand City Chamber of Commerce — $18 per show plus a $3 service charge on each ticket.

Grounds passes at $12 apiece per day let folks into the fairway and shows at the Garden Stage and Night Club. (It's $8 per for seniors and active military.)

Garden Stage: Steve Allen and Sweet Misery, Duke Jethro, Bay Area Blues Revue, Ken Arconti, C.P. Love, Terry Hanck, Webb Sisters, Taylor P. Collins, Tom Ball and Kenny Sultan, Jackie Payne, Rhino Blossom, Burnin' Vernon, Bobby Murray Revue and the wonderful Blues and Jazz Youth Chorus (children from Seaside's Oldemeyer Center).

Info: 649-6544 or 394-2652.

Nick's things

All-purpose jazzman Nick Williams hosts another in his series of jam sessions at 7 p.m. Thursday, June 17, in the old Hayward Building at Carmel's Vista Lobos Park. He bills these as family affairs with optional donations and tasty refreshments.

The sets draw such performers as Bob Blankenship, Bucky Boyns, Dennis Murphy, David Kempton, Judy Blair, Bob Phillips, Andy Weis. Co-sponsors: Carmel Rec Department, Josephus Daniels Gallery, Bud's Pub, Shop in the Garden.

Then Nick will offer a "mixed bag" of musical entertainment at 8 p.m. Wednesday, June 23, at Pacific Grove's Portofino Cafe. Drummer Blankenship and Pianist Kent Glenn will help out as Nick moves through original jazz charts, blues and standards.

Williams plays many instruments, writes, arranges,

Spielberg's dino-movie a blockbuster, but no classic

By PAUL WOLF

JURASSIC PARK
Galaxy 6 Cinemas,
Del Monte Shopping Center
Starring: Sam Neill, Laura Dern, Jeff Goldblum, Richard Attenborough.
Director: Steven Spielberg
Rating: ★★

YOU'RE FLEEING in the car trying to escape a 20-foot tall Tyrannosaurus-rex, whose footsteps rattle the landscape like little earthquakes. EEEYIKES...the lizard is gaining, and you glance into the rear view mirror and the ugly head lunges in your face.

This first thrilling sequence in Steven Spielberg's much-hyped Jurassic Park takes nearly an hour to arrive. First we have to endure seemingly endless background — all the whys and hows concerning this prehistoric theme park. True enough, relentless action ensues, and the tempo of the film quickens. But it's old hat already. We've done this roller-coaster — can we try another ride?

Spielberg's popular Raiders of the Lost Ark trilogy is blessed with variety. We jump from horseback to train, from truck to sled — sometimes under a broiling sun, other times in a remote cave. Jurassic Park is not only a pointless exercise in directorial excess, it is a tiresome affair.

And that's a shame!

Rich work

The three-year-old novel by Michael Crichton (who co-wrote the screenplay) is a rich work of imagination, strong not only in action but in communicating a profound lesson: The theme park's disaster shows that nature will not be strapped by human will.

The book and film start with an intriguing premise, that prehistoric life forms can be reassembled from preserved DNA samples, found in the blood of mosquitos and lodged in the tree sap. The plan to open such a park suggests capitalism-gone-crazy.

But all of this background could have been passed along in five minutes, not 55 minutes. The consistent weakness of this film is Spielberg's sense of storytelling. It seems his energies went fully to recreating dinosaurs at the expense of the demands of script and plot.

In the book, the premise is nowhere near so interesting as the moral struggle played out between park impresario John Hammond and the eccentric but fundamentally moral mathematician, Ian Malcolm.

Sanitized

With the Hammond character (Attenborough) so sanitized in the film — he's a good guy now — and Malcolm (Goldblum) reduced to a minor figure, no such tension exists. The park represents only one thing — a dangerous place where you may get eaten.

The film also suffers from a pair of tepid performances by Sam Neill and Laura Dern, the two paleontologists who are studying scattered fossils one day and having close encounters with the real thing the next. Fortunately, Crichton managed to preserve some witty lines in the screen play, and child actors Joseph Mazzello and Ariana Richards stand out.

This reviewer is not one of those who believes a film must mimic the literary work that inspired it, but clearly Spielberg had a rich source in which to mine. Preoccupied with special effects, the director missed a chance to produce a classic and settled instead for a blockbuster.

PHOTOGRAPHER GARY M. Russell is exhibiting a collection of black and white prints through July 11 at Brewster O'Brien's in Monterey.

The show also includes "black and white hand-colored photographs," he says, "and hand-coated watercolor paper which is then printed and hand-colored." Polaroid Transfers too.

MONTEREY ARTIST Ed Leeper's 6,000,000 now is displayed through June at Monterey Peninsula College Library. It's about the Holocaust and contains that many marks on 4,291 sheets of heavy paper.

The marks, Leeper says, "represent the Jews murdered by the German government during World War II. The work was started on June 18, 1987, and completed February 12, 1991."

He adds that he's showing at community colleges "because I believe most young people are not aware of the Holocaust. I believe my work's passive statement is a good way to bring the Holocaust to their attention. There's 'ethnic cleansing' in Bosnia while (national magazines) tell us that racism is on the rise in the United States."

California's best amateur golfers eye title tourney

A FIELD of 102 players — the Golden State's finest amateurs — will begin action Monday, June 21, in the California Golf Association's Amateur Championship.

All matches will be played at Pebble Beach.

Exactly 51 players apiece from the Northern California and Southern California Golf Associations have qualified for this 82nd renewal of the important event.

Latest champion Todd Demsey, who recently won the National Collegiate Athletic Association's Men's Championship, will not defend as previously reported. From Rancho Santa Fe, he has elected to play in the east.

However, there are three former champions in the field — Gary Vanier (1982), Casey Boyns (1989) and Charlie Wi (1990).

The stroke portion of the tourney starts Monday with the field split for play at Pebble Beach and Spyglass Hill. The low 32 players advance to match play with two rounds scheduled Wednesday and Thursday prior to the scheduled 36-hole final on Friday.

An added attraction to stroke play qualifying is the North/South Roger Lapham Challenge Cup confrontation. Six players from each association have been chosen to take part. The five low scores count each day.

The SCGA has won the past two competitions. Boyns, Vanier, Bob Blomberg, Joey Ferrari, Randy Haag and Lucio Alvarez will play for the NCGA.

Competition in the handicap divisions of the tournament will be played at Poppy Hills and Old Del Monte.

ROBINSON JEFFERS Tor House Foundation will present a special event starting at 7:30 p.m. Friday, June 18, in Sunset Center's Carpenter Hall — A Lively Evening in Ireland with Jeffers, Una, and Yeats.

One fact behind the occasion — the late poet of Carmel Point and his wife Una both loved the poetry of Irish genius William Butler Yeats.

Local bard and actor Taelen Thomas will offer readings from both men. Writer Elayne Wareing Fitzpatrick will read from Una's diaries.

Then there will be Touring Ireland — a video on adventures all over the Green Isle. The foundation is putting together such a tour.

Donation: $5 per.

THE SECOND Annual Josephine Kernes Memorial Benefit Horse Show will be held on Sunday, June 20, at the Equestrian Center of Pebble Beach.

The hunter and jumper show for children and adults will send proceeds to support the Kernes Memorial Pool's swim and water exercise programs serving disabled people.

Events will run from 8 a.m. until 5 p.m. Information on underwriting donations may be obtained by calling show coordinator Chris Wood (649-0992).

Marvella Peterman, the program's executive director, invites spectators to "come and enjoy the competition and support the riders and Kernes Pool with your presence. There is no admission charge."

THE GREAT Americana Festival will be held from Fisherman's Wharf through downtown Monterey on Saturday and Sunday, June 19-20.

The wide-ranging free event will include food and beverage booths, street dancing, a display of vintage and custom autos, three stages for live entertainment.

A handbill lists the sponsors as Old Monterey Business Association, Ambassadors of American and International Culture (non-profit arts advocacy group based in Castro Valley), Western Vehicle Association, others.

Hours — 9:30 a.m. until 6 p.m. both days. An Ambassadors statement says funds raised from music stage sponsorships and the like will benefit school music programs, youth rehabilitation programs, Girl Scouts, abused children's programs "and other community organizations."

Ambassadors media material mentions other activities in connection with the Great Americana Festival: Monterey Bay Theaterfest (see separate story), the dog events organized as a fundraiser by American Cancer Society of California (see item below), a Friday night concert at Laguna Seca's Ocean Aire Amphitheater. Information: 375-2102.

Ambassadors spokesperson Tom Wiggins says the downtown entertainment will include a country music review, hillbilly clog dancers and "line dancers attempting to set a world record for the longest line dance." Also promised are blues acts plus vintage rock and roll .

ABOUT THAT special doggie program scheduled on Saturday, June 19, at Monterey High School. It carries the snappy title Shake, Wag 'n' Roll — Movin' Against Cancer.

The American Cancer Society (ACS) announcement says dog owners of all ages are invited to enter those pets in a walk-a-dog-athon through downtown Monterey and "wacky contests" including dog and owner look-alike.

Registration begins at 9:30 a.m. and contests will be held from 10 a.m. until 1 p.m. The walk starts at 1 p.m. Call ACS at 372-4521 about signups — the fee, forms, specific walk route. Or forms may be obtained at participating downtown shops.

Dog owners in the walk are asked to raise pledges. Top fundraisers will be eligible for prizes if donations are turned in by noon Saturday.

Opening ceremonies will be hosted by Chicago Steve, the comedian, the announcement says.

There will be a demonstration by Canine Companions for Independence and special exhibits.

Jazz Tides: KAZU Public Radio plans a blues marathon teaches and runs Nick Williams Music of Carmel. He even does Bill Clinton impressions. Tickets: $5 per.

Radio action

Celebrating the Monterey Bay Blues Festival, KAZU Public Radio will broadcast 12 hours of special programming — artists recorded digitally at last year's get-together — from 9 a.m. until 9 p.m. on Friday, June 18. "This music is unavailable anywhere else and was recorded especially for us," says Program Director Peter Williams.

Featured will be Barbara Morrison, The Pontiax, Delbert McClinton, Ruth Brown, Johnny (Clyde) Copeland and Chris Cain. There also will be interviews with blues greats and profiles of headliners at the 1993 fest.

Kelly's coup

Meanwhile, honcho Kelly Leonard of Doc Ricketts' Lab near Cannery Row has booked killer blues guitarist Joanna Conner at 9 p.m. Wednesday, June 23. An extremely bright young woman, Joanna went to Chicago as a youngster "to play with the best" and ended up in a challenge jam with the great Buddy Guy. She won his respect and plays the South Side clubs regularly when she's not on tour. Cover of only $5.

The next night, Kelly offers a double bill — boogie queen Deanna Bogart and power vocalist Barbara Morrison. Starts at 9 p.m. and costs $8 per person.

Meanwhile, over in Salinas, the third annual Taft Miller Summer Jam will kick off at 11 a.m. Saturday, June 19, in the outdoor amphitheater of Hartnell College Performing Arts Center. Signed up: Fred Hamann Band, Hydra, Back Room Blues Band, Desert Fire, Rhino Blossom.

"A blues set and all-star jam will top off the day," says organizer and Rhino Blossom vocalist Lauri Hofer. Proceeds will benefit Western Stage's Disabled Artist and Patron Development Fund. (Taft Miller is a much-loved Western Stage staffer who became disabled.)

Since admission is free, bucks will be gathered through donations and concession booths. Those all-stars include Roger Eddy, Dennis Murphy, Lee Durley, Danny Abrams, Johnny Rocker, Andy Weis, on and on.

Short takes

• At the Casa Cafe and Bar on Thursday through Saturday nights (June 17-18-19) — Dottie Dodgion on drums, Eugene Wright with his standup bass and "very special surprise guests from San Francisco." So says Dottie.

• Juneteenth, freedom celebration created by the black community, will be celebrated hereabouts on June 17-18-19. At 7 p.m. Thursday there will be a panel discussion at Oldemeyer Center with Pope McDonald, Ace Hill, Ingrid Tyson, Titos Sampos.

Seaside's Hayes CME Church will present spiritual music from 7-9 p.m. Friday. Many fine voices. Buddy Lowe will serve as MC.

And from 10 a.m. until 5 p.m. Saturday, Family Fun Day will be held at Laguna Grande Park — reggae music, vendors, MPC Black Theater Group, raffles, fashion show, Soledad Clowns, Seaside fire engine display. (Jazz trumpeter Tanya Darby of Monterey High will receive a scholarship from Monterey Bay Blues Fest.)

All these are free and public.

• Kuumbwa Jazz Center in Santa Cruz was to have spotlighted legendary pianist and composer Horace Silver on Monday night, June 21. Gig cancelled.

• Dr. Loco's Rockin' Jalapeno Band will appear during the Monterey Strawberry Festival at Laguna Seca on Sunday, June 27, it was announced this week.
